Senate Unit Acts to Probe Wire-Taps In Capital

Pepper Will Head Inquiry; Lt. Shimon Of Police Certain to Be a Central Figure

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The Senate District Committee unanimously agreed yesterday to start an immediate investigation of all forms of wire-tapping in Washington by Metropolitan policemen and others.

The probe, which has far-reaching political overtones, also will check into allegations that Federal agencies use, or have used, recording devices on telephone conversations.

Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), of the District group, named Senator Claude E. Pepper (D., Fla.), to head a special five-man investigating subcommittee.

Others appointed to the wire-tapping inquiry are: Senators Kefauver (D., Tenn.), chairman of the Senate Crime Committee; Neely, Hendrickson (R., N. J.), and Darby (R., Kan.).

Senator Smith Resigned

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), originally was placed on the special subcommittee, but later withdrew.

Selection of Pepper to head the subcommittee was interpreted as a tip-off that the investigation would be a no-holds-barred affair. Pepper was recently defeated for reelection to the Senate.

He said he hoped to call the first meeting Friday afternoon.

Accused In Hughes Case

Shimon has been accused of being connected with the alleged wire-tapping of Howard Hughes' telephone in a Washington hotel during the 1947 investigation of the plane-maker's war contracts.

A partisan flareup is expected in the new inquiry since Hughes and Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), a member of the 1947 investigation, locked horns so bitterly during the contracts probe. Brewster now is chairman of the Senatorial Republican Campaign Committee.

A Federal grand jury is conducting a separate inquiry into wire-tap charges against Shimon.

Neely disclosed that "a very prominent Senator" told him the

2 Plead Innocent To Conspiracy With Atomic Spy

New York, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—Abraham Brothman, 36, and Miriam Moskowitz, 34, his blond business associate, pleaded innocent today to charges that they conspired to obstruct justice in the Dr. Klaus Fuchs-Harry Gold atomic spy case.

Federal Judge T. Hoyt Davis of Atlanta refused to reduce the defendants' bail of $25,000 each and ordered their case put over to September 11 when a trial date will be set.

Defense Attorney William L. Messing, who sought to have the pair's bail reduced to $100 each, said "there is no charge of spying against the defendants. It was nothing but pure vindictiveness to fix the present high bail."

Brothman and Miss Moskowitz are charged with arranging for Gold and Brothman to tell the same lies to a Federal grand jury investigating espionage in 1947.

Mail Ballots May Decide In Missouri

St. Louis, Aug. 2 (AP).—Absentee ballots held the key tonight in President Truman's effort to nominate a Democratic candidate for Senator in his home State of Missouri.

As the unofficial count of regular ballots neared an end, the President's man was trailing by 4750 votes and his opponent claimed victory. The count in 4586 of 4676 precincts was:

Former United States Representative Thomas C. Hennings, jr., of St. Louis, 178,967; State Senator Emery W. Allison of Rolla—Mr. Truman's choice—174,217.

Hennings' managers said there were too few outstate votes left to affect the outcome, but Allison said he wanted to see the absentee ballots, which won't be officially canvassed for two weeks.

Lewis, Billeci Convictions Thrown Out

Court of Appeals Cites Four 'Errors' By Judge Holtzoff

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday threw out gambling convictions of William (Snags) Lewis and Frank Billeci and criticized District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff, who presided at the trial.

In a unanimous 11-page opinion, Circuit Judge E. Barrett Prettyman ruled Judge Holtzoff "was in error" four times during the 18-day trial last January. Judges Henry W. Edgerton and James M. Proctor concurred.

Lewis, described during the trial as head of a 14-million-dollar numbers lottery syndicate, was sentenced to serve from 10 to 30 months in jail. Billeci was sentenced to serve from 8 to 27 months.

They were among 36 men indicted in April, 1949, by a special grand jury which spent 18 months investigating Washington gambling.

New Trial Possible

The decision returns the case to District Court for a possible new trial. Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz would not tell reporters whether the case would be reprosecuted.

The Court of Appeals opinion said Judge Holtzoff erred on these points:

1. In refusing to instruct the jury that no unfavorable inference should be drawn against Lewis and Billeci because certain witnesses refused to testify on ground of possible self-incrimination.

2. In telling the jury they could draw the inference that if certain witnesses had been called by the defense their testimony would have been unfavorable to the defendants.

3. In telling the jury: "If you believe from the testimony that the defendants have committed the crime of which they are charged then you must find a verdict of guilty. If you do not believe that the defendants have committed the crime of which they are charged, then you must find a verdict of not guilty."

"That statement is not the law," the Court of Appeals said. The instruction was an error because it omitted the law on

Move to Cut Excise Taxes Is Defeated

Senate Group Votes Levy Hike on TV Sets, Deep Freezers And Slot Machines

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday got off to a quick start on the President's Korean emergency tax program by turning thumbs down on all cuts in excise levies and voting three increases.

Television sets and deep freezers, now untaxed, were singled out for a 10-percent manufacturers' excise levy to raise 50 million dollars in new revenue. Another five million dollars was picked up by increasing the tax on slot machines from $100 to $150 a machine.

In addition, the committee began probing "loopholes," as requested by the President, to salvage more revenue.

Income Tax Action

Action on Mr. Truman's main proposals for nearly five billion dollars in increased corporate and individual income taxes is slated to follow later this week, Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) said.

The quick start on the new tax program followed an appeal for immediate action from Treasury Secretary John Snyder at a morning session of the tax-making group.

In a statement prepared for the committee, Snyder served notice that the President's emergency tax proposals "must be followed soon by a more comprehensive program," possibly including an excess profits tax. He termed the emergency tax program "only a first step."

Snyder said in so many words that the President does not want Congress to impose an excess-profits tax at once. He asked the committee to leave the method of dealing with that "complex problem" to a somewhat longer study of wartime experience.

In the House Ways and Means Committee mounting sentiment for an excess profits levy also met with an initial reverse, but proponents said they have only started to fight.

Profits Tax Tabled

The House unit, by a vote of 15 to 8, tabled a motion to consider an excess-profit tax as part of the new Vinson bill for renegotiation of defense contracts. Representative Wilbur Mills (D., Ark.) made the motion for consideration of the levy. Committee members

Alimony Ordered To Give Daughters College Education

New York, Aug. 2 (NYHT.).—Finding that "exceptional circumstances" make a college education "a necessity," Justice I. Montefiore Levy ruled today that a father must pay enough alimony to his divorced wife to send their two grown daughters to college.

Alan Herbert was directed to pay $4850 a year to his divorced wife, the former Dorothy Harwood, beginning September 1.

A college education, Levy held, should be considered as "something to be granted to children, where the capacity exists, as a matter of course."

He held the father was able to make the payments.

'Automatic' Controls Law Is Proposed

Fulbright Advances Plan for Wage-Price Freeze at Point on Living Cost Index

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Senate Banking Committee, which earlier in the day voted overwhelmingly to give President Truman permissive authority to invoke price and wage fixing, reversed its field yesterday afternoon and began flirting with the idea of an automatic price-wage freeze.

Sentiment in the committee, it was learned, heavily favored the eleventh-hour proposal of Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) to impose a rollback on all prices and wages to a level prevailing before the Korean conflict. The rollback would go into effect automatically at the moment that the cost of living increased by some figure between 5 and 10 percent over the pre-Korean level.

Opposed by White House

White House economists, it was learned last night, violently object to the plan. It was indicated that their views—to the effect that the plan is administrative and economically mad—are generally shared throughout the Administration. A principal objection, only one of many, is that the proposed scheme would remove all discretion from the President as to the timing and extent of the application of price and wage controls.

Fulbright's idea, echoing a proposal broached a few hours earlier by Senator Johnson (D., Tex.), was placed before the Senate Banking Committee after it had completed its consideration of an Administration bill providing powers of allocation, priorities, credit restrictions and production financing.

Hoarding Penalty Put In

The committee made several perfecting changes in the bill, and added a provision declaring that all forms of hoarding, even at the consumer or householder level, were illegal and subject to penalty.

Then it turned to the question of adding power to impose rationing, wage and price control. It voted, 12 to 1, in favor of giving the President such powers, on a standby basis—that is, to be invoked when, and only to the extent, the President wished.

It voted down, by a large majority, an amendment offered by Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) providing an immediate freeze of all prices (but not, as was wrongly reported in The Washington Post yesterday, of wages) for six months.

The committee then began consideration of draft legislation, worked up by Administration sources, for the standby powers. It found the draft far too complicated and involved.

At this point, Fulbright offered

Senate Tries To Finish Up On Funds Bill

Meets at 11, Limits Debate in Attempt To Pass Measure Today

The Senate agreed yesterday to limit further debate on the long-delayed $32,599,000,000 appropriations bill in an effort to pass it before another nightfall.

It decided to meet at 11 a. m. today, an hour early, and agreed that after 2 p. m. no Senator shall speak longer than five minutes on any proposed amendments.

The big money bill, providing funds to run the Federal Government through next June, already is long overdue. Technically, it should have been through Congress and signed by the President before the present fiscal year began on July 1.

The biggest hurdle still ahead is an attempt by a bipartisan economy bloc to cut all nondefense items by 10 percent. Sponsors claim it would save more than 800 million dollars. The decision on that amendment, sponsored by 35 Senators, is due shortly before the vote on final passage

Before that vote, however, there will be a test on a move by Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) to exempt funds for the Marshall Plan and other foreign economic aid from further trimming.

The bill now provides $2,450,000,000 for the third year of Marshall Plan economic aid to Europe.

In yesterday's debate, Smith argued that any cuts that would weaken the economic situation of Marshall Plan countries would "jeopardize" their military position and thereby endanger the United States' defense.

Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) contended that foreign aid funds deserve the same exemptions as military appropriations on the grounds that they are all "one ball of wax."

Questions Method

Acheson Hits Rider Giving Spain a Loan

Secretary of State Acheson yesterday said his department was opposed to the Senate's action in directing the Export-Import Bank to make a 100 million dollar loan to Spain.

He talked to reporters after Senator Bridges (R., N. H.), proposed that the United States seek an agreement with the Franco government for the use of Spanish bases in case of war.

Acheson said the State Department was not opposed to a businesslike loan from the Export-Import Bank to Spain, but was opposed to the rider, which the Senate tacked onto the omnibus appropriation bill on Tuesday. This, as drawn up by Senator McCarran (D., Nev.), and modified by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), "directed" the Export-Bank to lend 100 million dollars to Spain.

The McCarran-O'Mahoney rider was approved by a vote of 65 to 15, with Administration leaders making no effort to stop it. It is expected to have powerful support when it comes up in the House.

Senator Bridges told reporters he thought the proposed loan to Spain might very well be broadened so that Spain can be included among countries that are to share in the more than 5 billion dollars to be spent for rearmament abroad.

"If Spain wants to be included in arms aid," Bridges said, "there is no reason why we shouldn't negotiate for some bases which we

New Delhi, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—The government has smashed a plot to assassinate Premier Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Indian Home Secretary Sardar V. Patel said today.

Patel told Parliament Nehru's life was in danger.

U. S. Rejects 'Deals' to End Korean War

Peace There Won't Be Tied to Another Issue, Austin Tells Council

Lake Success, Aug. 2 (AP).—American Chief Delegate Warren R. Austin today heatedly rejected any "deals" for a settlement of the Korean war.

Austin turned down, for the second straight day in the Security Council, a Soviet move to link the question of Red China's entrance into the U. N. with the Korean war. He said the United States will never agree that the end of North Korean aggression depends on any other issue.

"So long as men are dying on the battlefield in defense of the United Nations," Austin said, "this Council will not wish to cheapen their suffering or sully their heroism by seeming to engage in the consideration of deals."

Agenda Argued

The American also rejected again a Soviet move intended to water down the Council's previous decision that Communist-supported North Korea is the aggressor against the Republic of Korea, which is backed by the U. N.

The Council adjourned at 6:15 p. m. until 3 p. m. Thursday without acting on its agenda. The Soviet Union is seeking to have the Council take up the question of seating Communist China before going on to the Korean problem.

Austin joined five other delegates in demanding the Council put everything aside except the issue of aggression upon the Republic of Korea, a question that has been before the Council five weeks. Backing Austin were Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Britain, Jean Chauvel of France, Arne Sunde of Norway, Antonio Quevedo of Ecuador and Alberto I. Alvarez of Cuba.

Quevedo, a new delegate, said the General Assembly is the proper place to settle the Chinese question.

Jebb told Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob A. Malik, August president of the Council, that Korea and China are in the same part of the world but that is about as far as he could go in admitting a link to the two countries. He said 52 of the U. N. members are backing the council's efforts to end aggression in Korea and that question must have priority above all others.

Jebb said Malik could put in

Bloody Fight Near Chinju; Yongdok Foe Forced Back

Naktong River Line Offers Allies Best Defense Position To Protect Pusan

Tokyo (Thursday), Aug. 3 (AP).—American troops today fell back on the central front to make the Naktong River the United Nations defense barrier for much of the north and west sides of the Korean beachhead.

Field dispatches said the general withdrawal was expected to be the last major U. N. pullback of the war.

Battle-ready United States Marines streamed ashore and started immediately for the hard-pressed lines. Ahead of them were Army reinforcements which had arrived earlier.

One of the critical sectors was west of Pusan, the main supply port at the southeastern tip of Korea. Fighting raged only 40 miles to the west of the city.

The general withdrawal, however, apparently did not extend this far south on the western side of the box-shaped beachhead.

GIs Near Chinju, Then Retire

Latest field reports said Army tanks and troops were engaged in bloody fighting after halting a powerful Korean Communist thrust 40 miles west of Pusan with a counterattack. The Americans drove to within three to five miles of Chinju before returning to their positions, an Eighth Army communique said today.

The general withdrawal—planned and orderly—began two days ago. Its aim apparently was to relieve the heavy pressure of 10 Red divisions—possibly 100,000 troops—until fresh Army and newly arrived Marine units can get into combat.

The Reds were pressing hard all along the shrunken U. N. defense perimeter which outnumbered American and South Korean forces have been holding. The line was marked by flaming towns and villages from Chinju, 55 miles west of Pusan, on the south, to Yongdok on the east coast 80 miles north of the key port.

The Eighth Army communique said South Korean troops had fought "to the town" of Yongdok and were pursuing the retreating Reds.

'Peace' Marchers Defy N. Y. Police Ban; 13 Arrested

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—Leftist "peace" marchers, banned from heavily guarded Union Square, defiantly clashed with police today in a tense, noisy brawl.

An estimated 2000 marchers formed ranks amid thousands of homegoing workers at the height of the rush hour.

"We want peace—open up the square," they cried.

Mounted police charged their ranks and scattered them, but they reformed again and again as the brawl swirled through the streets of downtown Manhattan.

A 1000-man police detail—stationed like an army around the square—spent an hour breaking up the demonstration.

Triumph at the Watergate

16 Kettle Drums Help Roar Out Berlioz's Judgment Day Music

By Paul Hume
Post Reporter

The biggest and most important concert on the country's summer music program was played at the Watergate last night.

There, the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission presented the first of two performances of the Requiem by Hector Berlioz. The monumental work will be given again tonight by the Sesquicentennial Chorus and David Lloyd, tenor soloist.

The evening was planned as a memorial to Pierre L'Enfant, designer of the City of Washington, on whose 196th birthday it took place.

No other setting of the Requiem can compare with the titanic ideas found in Berlioz' score. Its power is found not only in its vast instrumental scores but in the musical conceptions behind them.

When you take four extra brass choirs, and 16 kettle drums and give them the job of depicting the coming of the Day of Judgment, and name the Almighty with such titles as "Judge Eternal" and "King of tremendous majesty," you are combining words and music in one of the mighiest religious images conceived by man.

Last night, the concert stage of the Watergate was filled with the recently formed chorus. These Washington singers brought high credit to themselves and their city, as they strove and won victories in sound, under their great conductor, Paul Callaway.

Part of the National Symphony Orchestra was seated in front of them—the part that Berlioz directed should be near the chorus. Extra brass instruments, kettle drums, and other percussion players sat on the auxiliary barge in front of the stage.

As the Requiem moved from mood to mood, one heard the most awesome musical sound in all literature, the massed instruments and voices in the Day of Wrath sequences.

The excitement of the piece moved the large audience to interrupt the sections of the work with applause which rose to shouts and whistles at intermission and at the close of the concert.

Large Share

The Sesquicentennial Chorus deserves its large share of the praise. A new chorus needs time to mellow in tone and balance. Yet it delivered its taxing pages with ease and brilliance.

Plenty of the beauty of the Requiem lies in the quiet stretches between the massive effects. There are times when the composer's music is less inspired than his finest moments. But it is a work of such magnitude that we marvel these moments come so seldom.

Lloyd sang his cruel part with easy beauty. He also gave the Use Nylon and Electricity

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—An electrical arm and nylon hand for amputees was announced today by the International Business Machines Co.

The electrical machinery is housed in a hollow artificial forearm. Inside nylon fingers of an almost perfect looking hand there are joints and flexing rods of metal that closely imitate natural muscle movements.

The power comes from a tiny battery carried usually in a pants pocket.

The amputee works the fingers mostly with his toes. He wears an insole with keys that he plays with his toes much like playing an organ. These keys connect with the electrical arm.

The announcement says this arm and hand can make about all the natural movements of an arm, and enough of the motions of hand and fingers to permit two-handed work.

The fingers will grasp an egg without breaking the shell, but are able to put on a pressure of 16 pounds, all at will. This arm throws darts, pours drinks, turns door knobs, turns on light switches and does a handsome job of feeding.

Only two of the arms have been made. They represent two types of amputee problems: one the person with a fragment of biceps left, the other with nothing but a bare shoulder stump. It is proposed to make other models and have them tried by amputees, and then find out the best ways to make electrical arms and hands for mass production.

Gearing for Hydrogen Bomb

DuPont Given Responsibility For Developing New A-Plants

The United States appeared last night to be gearing itself to produce a hydrogen bomb without slackening—perhaps even while increasing—its pace on A-bombs.

A major segment of the job was assigned to the duPont Company already experts in making plutonium, which goes into the present atomic weapons.

The Atomic Energy Commission announced a move that—while the AEC did not say so—could mean the commission is going to make large quantities of tritium, a possible ingredient of the H-bomb, without curtailing the production of plutonium.

Tritium is a super-heavy form of hydrogen, heavier even than the deuterium of heavy water.

The AEC announced it had appointed the du Pont Co. to design, construct and operate some brand new plants of "advanced design." These would be for the production of materials "which can be used either for weapons or for fuels."

The commission said operation of the proposed new plants "will provide new knowledge that will speed the progress of the atomic energy program."

This could mean an objective of speeding up the production of A-bombs while devoting attention also to developing the projected H-bomb.

A site for the du Pont atom plant is yet to be selected, but the AEC said it may take as much as 200,000 acres.

The project will be financed at least in part from the special 260-million-dollar appropriation President Truman asked July 7 for atomic expansion.

War Plans Outlined By Medical Society

Serve 21 Months

Bill Provides For Drafting Of Physicians

A bill to require doctors, dentists and medical technicians up to age 45 to register with draft boards for possible induction in the armed forces was introduced in the House yesterday.

The measure is sponsored by Representative Saylor (R., Pa.), who as a naval officer took part in the invasion of Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

Those called up would serve for 21 months, the same length of time as other draftees, whose registration age is 18 through 25 years.

The first to be called up under the special medical classification would be those who received training at Government expense through the Army and Navy medical training programs and who never served on active duty.

The next group would be those who also received such training but who served less than 21 months.

Also liable for induction as a third group would be doctors who did not receive their education at Government expense but who served less than 90 days on active duty.

The District Medical Society yesterday announced a five-point priority plan for getting doctors into the armed forces.

Though geared to a persuasion level, it could readily be adapted to a compulsive draft, they said.

First to go into uniform under the plan would be those new doctors who interned in Government hospitals without joining the armed forces. These would be followed, in order, by:

(a) Graduates of World War II medical training programs of the Army and Navy who did not serve as medical officers, and others deferred to continue medical training.

(b) World War II Army and Navy trained doctors who entered service as medical officers after VJ Day.

Those Who Didn't Serve

(c) Those physicians who graduated before World War II but did not serve during the war.

(d) Physicians who served the least time on active duty during World War II.

In addition to setting up the proposed order of call, the society's executive board proposed that county medical societies set up committees to determine which doctors should enter service under the priority set-up.

Such "procurement and assignment" committees, the board resolution stated, would be directed to use every effort to persuade the selected physicians to volunteer for armed forces' service.

The committees, somewhat similar to those set up in the early days of World War II to speed entry of doctors into military uniform, would consist of from five to seven members, a majority of whom would be World War II veterans, the board resolution proposed.

Basis of Priority

The priority system is based on a statement by the American Medical Association's Council on National Emergency Medical Service that doctors most obliged to enter uniform are "those physicians trained at Government expense and otherwise deferred during World War II."

It closely follows recommendations voted by the Physician—Veterans of World War II, an organization comprising some 400 doctor veterans of the District.

The priority plan, and its implementing resolution calling for creation of the special county committees, were forwarded yesterday afternoon to AMA headquarters in Chicago. If adopted by the AMA, it would set the pattern nationally, but on a county level, in determining which doctors should enter military service, board members said.

D.C.-Maryland Civil Defense Link Planned

Five nearby Maryland counties soon will be tied in with the District's civic defense air raid warning system, Assistant District Engineer Commissioner T. J. Hayes 3d said yesterday.

Only information that has been released on the system to warn against approaching enemy planes is that a special telephone has been installed in the No. 8 Police Precinct Station. Warnings would be called there from an operation center and the alarm given by a procedure not yet established.

Hayes said plans are being made to connect the No. 8 Precinct center by telephone and radio with key persons in the following Maryland counties: Montgomery, Prince Georges, Calvert, St. Mary's and Charles. The radio would also permit direct contact with Baltimore, he said.

In Baltimore, Lieut. Col. David I. McIntosh, Maryland Civil Defense director, announced appointment of a committee that will set up a warning system for Baltimore and five surrounding counties. McIntosh said communication networks linking warning systems on the Eastern Shore and western Maryland will be set up in the near future.

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 2 (AP). The United States will use troops if necessary to quell any Communist outbursts of violence or sabotage in West German, a high American official said today.

Limb Says Allied Drive Will Go to Manchuria

Somewhere in Korea, Aug. 2 (AP). Foreign Minister Ben C. Limb of South Korea today said the Allied drive against North Korean Reds—when it starts—will not stop short of the Manchurian border.

This was the first direct statement of determination to fight beyond the thirty-eighth parallel, which divides North and South Korea.

Limb said in a statement that the United Nations and South Korean forces were receiving reinforcements "in such quantities" they "soon will begin to push back the enemy."

Limb said the Soviet Union knew these facts "in trying to confuse world statesmen" by bringing peace in Korea and admission of Communist China before the United Nations.

Truman Seeks Change in Social Security Bill

President Truman summoned Democratic Congressional leaders to the White House yesterday to urge removal of what he considers an objectionable provision in the new Social Security bill.

The assignment appeared to be a tough one. The Senate and House have been at odds for months over terms of the intricate legislation, which would expand Social Security coverage and increase the benefits paid. A conference committee gave its final approval only Tuesday to a compromise version.

House Democratic Leader McCormack of Massachusetts, present at the White House conference, reported that Mr. Truman's main objection is to an amendment sponsored by Senator Knowland (R., Calif.).

The amendment would sharply restrict the authority of the Secretary of Labor to hold back unemployment compensation funds from States that fail to conform with set Federal standards of administration.

McCormack said the President hopes that every affort will be made to eliminate the amendment, or at least revise it materially. Senate Democratic Leader Lucas of Illinois had hinted Tuesday that Mr. Truman might even veto the bill if the amendment stays in.

Under the rules of the House and Senate, a compromise bill worked out by a conference committee cannot be amended. If it is not swallowed whole, or rejected outright by one chamber or the other, all that can be done is send it back to the conference committee with instructions to try anew for an acceptable agreement.

McCormack declined to say whether he would seek to send the bill back to conference, but Representative Walter A. Lynch (D., N. Y.) indicated he will make such a motion in the House Friday.

The Knowland amendment would prohibit the Secretary of Labor from withholding unemployment compensation funds from a state for 90 days after he made a determination that a state compensation program did not conform with Federal standards. During the 90 days, a court within the state could determine whether the State program conformed with Federal requirements.

Pfc. Walter J. Mason, son of Mrs. Mary Louise Mason, Williamsport, was reported missing in action.

Seven persons were reported killed.

Ballenger attended Richard Montgomery High School and once worked in an artificial limb factory. He enlisted at 17 and has been overseas a year, his mother reported.

Speculators Cleaning Up, Brannan Says

By the United Press

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan yesterday charged that some commodity speculators are "cashing in" on the Korean war with complete disregard of the effect on the economy or war effort.

He leveled the accusation in making public a report by the Commodity Exchange Authority that reflected a sharp increase in commodity trading since June 25. The situation, he added, is impairing the normal function of the exchanges.

His statement was intended to bolster President Truman's request to Congress for emergency authority to fix margin requirements in futures trading. The proposal, which would help keep a lid on food prices, has been received coolly in Congress.

President Truman wants to require persons who deal in commodity futures to put up more margin—or a bigger down payment—on such deals. Margins now are set by the exchanges themselves. The margins are now 10 to 15 percent on major farm commodities.

In this connection, Brannan said that under the rates established by the exchanges, speculators who put up the minimum amount could have made from 100 to 450 percent on their investment since June 25. Actually, probably no one made the top figure.

Soldier's Hearts Lift As Marines Arrive

Johnson Plan

$2 Billion In Weapons For Europe

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson disclosed yesterday that the United States plans to send more than two billion dollars worth of tanks, planes and artillery to western Europe to guard against a "mechanized assault" by Soviet Russia.

With Secretary of State Dean Acheson, he appeared before a House Appropriations Subcommittee to urge prompt approval of President Truman's request for an additional four billion dollars in United States arms aid to North Atlantic Pact allies and other free nations.

Acheson bluntly informed the subcommittee that "the best hope of peace in the current situation" lies in rearming this country and its allies with the "greatest speed."

Johnson revealed that more than half of the total aid funds is earmarked for heavy combat equipment that western European countries would need to repeal a panzer-type invasion from the east.

Another 400 million dollars would be earmarked to expand arms production in the western European countries themselves. A Marshall Plan official said they must "at least double" their military output.

Johnson said Communist leaders proved in Korea that they will loose armed aggression against weak neighbors

By Homer Bigart
NYHT News Service

Pusan, Korea, Aug. 2.—The first Marine combat units to reach Korea landed today ready for instant action and soon were streaming toward the front, probably in the southwestern sector.

Their equipment included 45-ton M-26 tanks, which mount 90-millimeter guns and are the heaviest American armor yet seen here. So far American armor has been no match for the Russian T-34 tanks, which mount an 85-millimeter gun that has consistently outgunned our mediums, which carry a 75.

The Marines also have flame throwers for use against cave and pillbox defenses and 3.5-inch bazookas, which already have been employed with great success against Russian-made tanks.

The Marines also brought their own air—A group, that will be partly carrier-based and partly land-based on Japan. They had their own hospital ship and enough supplies to operate independently of the Army for 45 days.

Their appearance gave embattled forces the greatest morale boost since this ugly little campaign began.

It was a modest force, this regimental combat team, but they brought efficient-looking equipment and, most important, the traditional leatherneck belief that their specialty is to put a quick stop to this nonsense.

These tough guys had no doubt whatever of their ability to kill. "Hell, that's what we're paid for," said Corp. Richard Stratder of Watertown, N. Y., as the first of seven transports docked in the sultry harbor shortly after 6:30 p. m.

Wake Up The Fleas

On the dock an Army band played "Semper Fidelis," and the Marines, eager to get ashore after a monotonous 21-day crossing of the Pacific, gave a yell that resounded over the dusty, flea-infested city.

Soldiers watched the unloading, and there was the usual exchange of pleasantries.

Marine (innocently): "You guys been playing marbles over here?"

Doughboy (sarcastically): "The Marines have landed, and the situation is out of hand."

Marine (indignantly): "You can go home now, junior. Us men have taken over."

At the time the Marines arrived the situation looked better. The Red drive on Pusan apparently had stalled temporarily because of supply difficulties.

For sentimental reasons the Marines hope to be fighting beside units of the Second Infantry Division. They recalled that in World War I the two outfits were side by side at the Argonne, St. Mihiel and Belleau Woods. They had a healthy respect for the Second Division doughboys who arrived Monday after a record 10-day crossing from the Pacific Coast in fast Army transports.

Information Wanted

Correspondents who went down today to meet the Marines were immediately surrounded by Leatherernecks who wanted information on matters ranging from the nearest North Korean Communists to methods of coping with flea bites and Korean women.

There had been some alarmist scuttlebutt that the Reds were only a few miles from Pusan. Some Marines kept an ear tuned for distant artillery fire as they entered the port. We told them it was not as bad as that.

The Marines made a number of salty but unprintable observations concerning Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson. If he had not starved the Marine Corps there would be more than one Marine regiment fighting in Korea, they said.

Reds' Officers Kill Selves to Avoid Capture

Tokyo, Aug. 2 (AP).—An American intelligence officer today said that no Red Korean officers above the rank of second lieutenant had been captured.

"They invariably kill themselves before we can grab them," he explained.

This was the first high official evidence that Koreans in the face of capture are committing harikiri, a former traditional practice of suicide among Japanese who considered themselves disgraced.

The bag of prisoners is extremely small, the officers said. Only 17 were captured yesterday.

Four Second Lieutenants

About four second lieutenants have been taken and "five or 10 noncoms."

"We are itching to get an officer commanding a tank," he said. "But so far we haven't any luck. When a tank is hit by 3.5-inch rockets or the bigger five-inchers from the air, it usually is destroyed and the whole crew killed."

The officer said the only Red tankmen captured came from damaged machines. In such cases, the commander, if unable to escape, shoots himself.

He said captured Red tankmen have disclosed they have two great fears—land mines and rockets from aircraft.

"They are mortally afraid of our planes," the officer said.

Large numbers of those taken prisoner were conscripted early this year. This indicates the date for war probably had been selected then.

Sharp Troop Contrast

Such troops contrast sharply with the Reds' crack divisions, at least those which had four years of training and were officered by Koreans who fought for the Chinese Communists. American officers have been frankly admiring the work of these divisions.

Fear, and not political indoctrination or deep conviction, motivates those taken prisoner, the officer said. Questioning brought out that the men are terribly afraid of their officers "and when given an order they behave like robots. They lack the ability to think and act with intelligence."

Prisoners said that when units are disorganized by such things as strafing they automatically become guerillas. They discard uniforms and put on civilian clothes.

"Even then," the officer said, "they don't quit fighting. They go on as guerillas or until they are put in new units."

Allies Liquidating I. G. Farben Combine

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—The Allied High Commission today started winding up the affairs of the billion-dollar I. G. Farben combine in preparation for its final liquidation.

Less than one billion dollars worth of assets is under Allied control, since nearly 68 percent of the world's largest chemical concern is located in Soviet East Germany.

The Allied High Commissioners called on all creditors who have claims originating prior to July 5, 1945, against any of the former 170 companies in the Farben empire in their zones to file them immediately. Claims must be filed within three months inside Germany, within four months inside Europe, and within six months outside of Europe.

Enemy Starts Own 'PX' With Seized U. S. Goods

With United States Troops in Korea, Aug. 2 (AP).—One of two prisoners-of-war taken on the Kochang front today said North Koreans started a "post exchange" with captured American supplies.

The prisoner was wearing GI socks and a GI undershirt. Asked where he got them, he said:

"They were issued to us by our officer at Kochang—along with two packs of American cigarettes each."

A Twenty-fourth Infantry Division rifleman—Pfc. Ernest Wood of Walton, N. Y., said, "They told us they had a stockade full of American prisoners at Seoul."

300 British Soldiers Sail for the Far East

Southampton, England, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—Three hundred soldiers of the First Battalion of the Wiltshire Regiment sailed today aboard the ship Empire Trooper for service in the Far East. A War Office spokesman declined to say whether the troops were bound for Korea.

Aid to Chiang For Formosa Defense Seen

NYHT News Service

President Truman, reversing a seven-month-old decision, is prepared to grant American arms to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek for defense of Formosa, it was learned yesterday.

An announcement is expected to be made after General Douglas MacArthur has reported on the needs of Chinese Nationalist forces on the island, and after an examination of American ability to fit these needs to other arms commitments.

Ammunition, aviation gasoline and spare parts for the Nationalist air force are expected to be first on the list. The generalissimo also was understood to have asked MacArthur for more elaborate equipment, including jet fighters and certain new types of radar, but there was no indication whether these will be forthcoming under direct American grants.

General MacArthur discussed the Nationalist arms need with Chiang Kai-shek on Tuesday, during his visit to Formosa. His report is expected momentarily in Washington.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson indicated at his news conference yesterday that the United States is thinking of sending arms to Formosa, but he declined to say what specific steps the Government will take. It is too early for a statement, the Secretary said, but all of it will be discussed in due time.

Chiang Planes Take Off; May Raid China Ships

Taipei, Formosa, Aug. 2 (AP).—Nationalist bomber and fighter planes in unusual numbers roared off Formosa airfields today.

Official quarters declined comment. But some circles said the planes may have launched an attack on Chinese Communist craft massed along the Red China coast.

The Reds have threatened for months to invade Formosa. But on June 27, after the outbreak of war in Korea, President Truman ordered the United States Seventh Fleet to protect Formosa. At the same time, he told the Chinese Nationalists to cease bombing the Reds.

Sources said General MacArthur, on his visit here earlier this week, may have approved certain types of attack such as strikes against Red craft. They pointed out that this could be considered a defensive measure against invasion.

The Nationalist air force has been pinched severely on high-octane gasoline. Renewal of air activity could mean that MacArthur had promised ample supplies on aviation gas.

The Lincoln-Mercury Division of Ford Motor Co. yesterday announced plans to build a new assembly plant on a 179-acre site west of Wayne, Mich.

Full 'Panel' Reports for Draft Test

The threatened crackdown of District Selective Service officials on youths failing to report for physical examinations showed good results in its first test yesterday. All 3 men scheduled from Boards 4 and 6 turned up.

Fifty were called initially, but 14 were excused from the physicals because of a change in dependency status or their removal from this area. Friday another 50 from Boards 11 and 15 have been directed to take the examination at Arlington Farms.

Monday, the thrice-weekly exams will be stepped up to 100 youths.

For this reason boards are expected to dip into their list of 23-year-olds and even 22s. Already some have been called from these age brackets for physicals, but draft officials emphasized they will not be called for induction until the citywide supply of 24 and 25-year-old 1As is exhausted.

The Army took in 14 and the Air Force two. The Marine Corps had 27 applicants and accepted two. About half the number, "including some who were not high school graduates, wanted information on how to get commissions," recruiting officers reported.

Reported Whitehead Becomes Grandfather

By The Associated Press

Don Whitehead, Associated Press correspondent in Korea, may not know this yet: he became a grandfather two days ago.

His first grandchild, a boy, Gene Neilsen 3d, was born here early Monday to Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead's daughter Ruth, Mrs. Gene Neilsen, jr. The baby's father is a private first class with the Third Infantry.

Whtehead flew to Korea just 10 days before his grandson arrived.

2d Hungnam Raid Wrecks 20% of Plant

Tokyo, Aug. 2 (AP).—United States jet fighters, Mustangs and twin Mustangs roared out over the Korean battlefield today, hitting Red supply and ammunition dumps and motor vehicles.

First Lieut. Robert K. Bobo, Reed City, Mich., said that Chinju, on the south front, was burning when he reached the target. He saw residents fleeing the battle-front town.

Aerial photographs revealed that a B-29 raid on Hungnam caused 20 percent damage to an important chemical and metals manufacturing plant Tuesday.

It was the second bomber strike against that Communist port city some 115 miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

A release by the Far East Air Forces said the Superforts showered 400 tons of bombs on Hungham. Direct hits were reported on 40 percent of the plant's main buildings.

Jet and Mustang pilots said they saw Red Korean troops pouring through Chinju, on the southeast front, apparently building up for a major assault along that flank.

Chinju, 55 miles west of Pusan, is a focal point for a Red thrust driving toward the United States supply port on the southeast coast.

Navy Chief Walter Coe of Parkersburg, W. Va., said planes destroyed 20 to 25 vehicles camouflaged on a side road.

Two tanks were knocked out 10 miles east of Chinju, airmen said.

Australia Speeds Sub-Killer Fleet

Canberra, Australia, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—Australia tonight announced emergency plans to construct a fleet of antisubmarine vessels after authoritative sources disclosed foreign submarines have been operating off the Australian coast.

Navy Minister Joseph Francis announced that Australia would consrtuct six 2000-ton antisubmarine frigates at a cost of 12 million pounds ($26,880,000).

Authoritative sources disclosed at the same time the Government was converting an east coast naval base into a powerful fortress equipped with bombproof submarine pens. Hundreds of experts were recruited, some from Britain, as the government rushed construction plans.

Some of the foreign submarines spotted in Australian waters were believed to have been identified, but the nationality of the power concerned is a strict secret.

The sources said fishermen first detected the submarines, believed to be among the world's largest, fastest and most modern. The undersea craft were believed to have been on long-distance cruises in the Pacific to test latest constructional techniques.

The Navy Minister, in announcing the frigate program, said the development of large submarines with high underwater speed and capable of long submersion made it necessary to modernize the Royal Australian Navy's antisubmarine force.

Red Coastal Guns Are Silenced by Australian Ship

TOKYO, Wednesday, Aug. 2 (AP).—Korean Communist shore guns on the Ongjin peninsula fired on an Australian destroyer yesterday and were shelled into silence, Far East Naval headquarters reported today.

A naval operations summary, issued at 12:45 p. m. (10:45 p. m., EDT, Tuesday) said four Red 120-mm. guns opened up from an emplacement on the west coast just south of the thirty-eighth parallel.

The Australian destroyer silenced them with 150 rounds. A British cruiser fired 57 rounds without receiving answering Red fire.

Americans Pull Back; Prepare Final Stand

their old line from Hamchang at the northwest corner of the box to Andong, eastward twoard Yongdok. The Americans on the north-south front just below Hamchang withdrew from Sangju eastward to new positions behind the river. Wednesday, they did the same on the Kumchon front, abandoning the town 30 miles northwest of Taegu.

How far south the withdrawal carried was not clear either in field dispatches or the Eighth Army communique. The communique indicated, however, it might be down to the point where the Naktong bends eastward toward Samnangjin north of Pusan. It said "highway bridges have been destroyed at strategic points on the roads leading into the friendly areas northeast of Chinju."

General MacArthur's war summary early today identified 10 North Korean divisions in action along the front. Elements of the United States divisions and South Korean divisions were taking the shock.

MacArthur conceded the "main enemy effort continued" on the Chinju-Pusan axis, the front about 40 miles west of Pusan. Field dispatches said casualties were heavy on both sides.

MacArthur identified the North Koreans on this front as the Sixth Division. The summary located the fighting 13 miles east of Chinju, but apparently later field reports put it 10 miles east of that coastal city west of Pusan.

The headquarters summary based on Wednesday action said "no gains by the enemy have been made in this fighting in the last 12 hours."

Sherman Tanks Lead Attack

Front dispatches said the American forces built around battered fragments of the 24th Division and reinforcements from Okinawa launched two counterattacks led by Sherman tanks.

One American counterthrust was halted along the Chinju-Pusan road, but the other appeared to be moving ahead.

Correspondent Hal Boyle reported "the Americans were going forward—but at a price."

Correspondent O. H. P. King, with ground forces in the area, said air strikes set Chinju ablaze and fired the neighboring village of Sachon in a five-hour raid.

As the battle lengthened, the Americans won high ground at Sangmun, 10 miles east of Chinju, and took the town of Wonbung to the southwest of Chungam, which is 17 miles east of Chinju, King said. Red troops, however, closed in behind the American positions.

The outcome of the battle still was undetermined hours later.

[The Eighth Army communique indicated these American forces later withdrew.—Editor's note.]

If North Korean forces succeed in overrunning American defensive positions along the Chinju-Pusan highway they have a clear sweep down the coastal plain to Pusan—but American reinforcements at an unidentified southeastern port (presumed to be Pusan) are increasing by the hour.

Pershing Tanks Arrive

Advance elements of the First Marine Division—believed to be approximately 6000 strong—were at dockside Wednesday night with 45-ton Pershing tanks, flame throwers and the 3.3-inch superbazooka.

United States Second Infantry Division troops who landed Monday and additional men from the Fifth Regimental combat team have been hurried to the forward areas during the past three days.

Besides the Sixth Division on the southern front, the Reds have massed their crack Fourth and Third Divisions on the west, with the Second stacked above them where the line bends eastward.

Three North Korean divisions, the 15th, 13th and first, are on the northern rim of the perimeter in the sector stretching between Sangju and Hamchang, a distance of hardly 12 miles.

MacArthur's communique said these were being "contained" by two South Korean divisions, the Fist and Sixth. Further east, the Red Eighth Division was at Yechon, the Seventh at Andong and the Fifth at Yonkdok.

Less than eight miles south of Kumchon, the North Korean Third Division continued "heavy pressure" on the United States First Cavalry at Chirye, but made no actual attacks, the headquarters summary said.

Farther south the North Korean Fourth Division slackened its efforts to outflank positions held by other units of the Twenty-fourth Division. This was in the vicinity of Kochang and Hyopchon where a two-pronged attack has met at a road junction in a thrust 25 miles west of Taegu.

Taegu continues to be the second most important goal of the Reds. Their main effort is being hurled in the drive on Pusan.

Situation Still Serious"

(In Washington a spokesman for the defense department found some encouraging signs in the over-all Korean war situation. "They have failed so far, because they have not succeeded in preventing the arrival of fresh United States troops and equipment," he said. The spokesman felt however the situation was "still serious.")

Korean Police Expanding to War on Guerillas

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Army disclosed yesterday that South Korean officials are launching a reorganization and expansion of their police—including the creation of heavily armed units to deal with guerillas.

Among the other public security measures to be taken, a spokesman said, is the organization of local units of the Korea Youth Corps into defense forces to support the police. All inhabitants of villages will be assigned defense duties, it was stated.

Strengthening of the police primarily is aimed at having ready a force capable of coping with local guerillas expected after the Red advance has been stopped and the enemy has been driven back north.

Held 'Reliabe Force'

The spokesman said the South Korean police are regarded as a "very loyal and reliable force," with members thoroughly screened to eliminate Communists.

A report on pyschological warfare activities conducted during the first month of fighting also was given out by the Army. Twenty-four million copies of nine leaflets have been dropped, while half-hour broadcasts now are going to both North Koreans and South Koreans.

The leaflets—called "Parachute News"—are of two types and aimed both at bolstering the morale of South Koreans and damaging that of the Northerners.

Women mobilized by the North Korean Army, said the Army spokesman, are used to repair roads and prepare food for the Red troops. South Korean men who have been impressed are used to haul supplies to combat areas.

The Army said a new estimate of North Korean casualties puts the total to date at over 37,000.

Meanwhile, Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee confirmed a story in Tuesday's edition of The Washington Post that the Army will reach a strength of one million officers and men or more this year under the expansion of active land forces from 10 to 14 divisions, by the call up of National Guard forces and rounding out of other units.

The Marine Corps likewise is going beyond its previously announced goal of 138,000 officers and men this year. Best estimates are that it will total over 170,000 by next summer. This will raise the total number of men planned to be under arms by that time to about 2,300,000.

Defense Plans Set

Other defense developments:

1. The Department of Defense was reported to be putting the finishing touches on a policy of deferments of reservists and National Guardsmen aimed at not harming essential industries such as plane building and other arms making.

2. The Air Force announced that it planned to appoint 495 civilian lawyers in its Judge Advocate General's Department. Appointments will be made in the grades of captain and lower.

3. Representative Albert J. Engel of Michigan, ranking Republican on the House Military Appropriations Subcommittee for many years gave this explanation why defense costs have risen so much:

Our heaviest bombers before World War II cost $123,000 and now cost four million dollars. Prewar fighters could be bought for $28,800 each, while today's jets run $632,000. Medium tanks used to cost $30,000 and now run $400,000 each. While part of the increase is due to inflation, the bulk must be credited to the great cost of new equipment like radar and an increase in requirements and size of weapons.

Strong Defense Line Possible Along Broad, Shallow Naktong

Hard-pressed American troops in Korea could set up a strong defense line and make a determined stand along the Naktong River.

The 326-mile river runs north and south between the Sobaek mountain range and the coastal hills. At the present time it broadly parallels the American defense lines from Andong in the north, Hamchang-Sangju in the west and Pusan on the south.

According to the National Geographic Society, the broad and shallow Naktong is the "last important natural water barrier in southeast Korea" between the Communists and Pusan.

Rising to the north, the river flows southward. It passes several miles west of Taegu, threatened provisional capital of South Korea, and then turns in a generally southeastern direction a few miles south of Pugong-ni. At this point it is joined by a tributary, the Nam, which flows northeastward from Chinju, a current hot spot in the fighting.

After making its southeastward turn, the Naktong twists along for about 100 miles before emptying into the Korea Straight. Its mouth is some five miles west of Pusan and 20 miles east of Masan.

The river, which is navigable for some distance upstream for light motor craft, splits into two major and several minor channels as it approaches the sea.

Its mouth is directly athwart communications between Masan and the vital port of Pusan. Traffic moves in this area over a series of bridges and ferries that link important highways along the east coast.

Guild Withdraws N. Y. Strike Offer, Ups Pay Demands

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Newspaper Guild today informed the struck World-Telegram and Sun that it was taking back last week's proposals and upping its wage demands.

The announcement followed one by the newspaper that its plant was being shut down for the duration of the strike, which yesterday entered its eighth week.

The Guild said that "the sharply rising cost of living requires that the Guild position must no longer be what it was when the strike began."

At the start of negotiations, the Guild asked an 18-percent general increase, later reducing it to 10 percent.

High Cost of Food Laid to Hoarding

Richmond, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—Food supplies in the United States are equally as large as last year, in some cases larger, Phillip Aylesworth, assistant to Secretary of Agriculture Brannan, said here today.

He laid the blame for increased prices squarely at the door of excessive buying, declaring there is absolutely no reason for increased prices other than "undue accumulation of foodstuffs by both wholesalers and retailers."

Divorced Twice, Wife Now Wants Another

Chicago, Aug. 2. (U.P.)—Mrs. Josephine Brown, 45, who married her husband three times and divorced him twice, today filed suit for divorce again.

She charged husband Harry Brown trapped her in an in-a-door bed, swung the bed to the wall and pushed it back into a closet. Her 17-year-old daughter Joyce rescued her.

Judge Rudolph Desort of Superior Court granted an injunction against Brown, prohibiting him from shutting his wife up in an in-a-door bed.

Elliott and Faye Appear Together

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—Faye Emerson and her divorced husband, Elliott Roosevelt, appeared together early today at a night club.

She was told it looked as if she and Roosevelt were going to make up.

"There's nothing as yet," she said. "We are friends—but we shall see."

Roosevelt said nothing, just beamed and kissed her on the ear. A club guest said he saw Roosevelt kiss her on the ear 17 times, and that she kissed him back as many times on the ear.

Kumchon Is a Hades As Yanks Withdraw

By Hal Boyle

In a U. S. Fifth Air Force Plane Over Kumchon, Korea, Aug. 2 (AP).—Leaping towers of orange flame are burning out the heart of ancient Kumchon tonight as invading North Korean Reds storm into one end of the city and American troops pull out the other.

It is now 8:18 p. m. (6:18 a. m. EDT) and American engineers have just blown up both spans of a railway bridge on the eastern side of the Kachon River, a tributary of the Naktong.

Bleacher Seat in Hell

Kumchon lies on the western side of the stream and it is like having a bleacher seat in hell to see it from a plane circling at 500 feet. The entire western waterfront is burning—about 500 yards or more of solid flame and billowing black smoke.

The red and orange tongues lick skyward at least 100 feet. In the northeast quarter of the city another area erupts like a vast furnace door suddenly opened.

As the spans of the railway bridge explode in a cloud of gray dust and drop heavily into the water, an American vehicle speeds out of the murky city. It rolls swiftly across an adjoining highway bridge to safety.

A combat engineer squad is coolly waiting to the last minute before destroying the highway bridge. They don't want to leave any United States soldiers trapped on the other side.

But they can't delay much longer. Already bright flashes through the deepening dusk show that the invaders' guns are in the city and dueling with American guns that were pulled back to new positions earlier.

The city itself is lost after a bitter, deadly, heartbreaking battle to hold it by the American First Cavalry Division.

There is dust, discomfort, danger and death below. But if an artist could paint the scene from this height he could make war look beautiful—if you thought only in terms of color and not of wasted effort and broken bodies.

The battle is being fought in a green and fertile valley bordered by high hills—yellow, eroded and wrinkled like the face of a tired old Korean. The American withdrawal is a fighting one. They are mad because gook guerillas even dared to raid their command post before dawn.

On the hillside, phosphorous artillery shells burst like gigantic powder puffs. Three nearby villages have joined in the concert of flame. Through the thickening smoke a blood-red sun shines a bloody farewell to a bloody day before dropping behind the mountains.

It shines like a beacon to Dante's Hades—a red sun lighting a red victory.

On the main road leading from the city a few vehicles can be seen. But most of the American artillery and other equipment moved out hours ago. The Reds are running a gantlet of American shells as they push through the city.

It is now 8:35 p. m. (6:35 a. m., EDT). New gun flashes wink from the smoke pall. A knot of combat engineers still wait at this end of the road bridge. Soon they will have to blow it up—leaving Kumchon to the enemy. (The bridge was blown up later.)

Kumchon is only another of the many cities that have fallen to the Communists in the last few days as the big Red fist has squeezed tighter in a desperate grab for an immediate victory.

The air tour of our lines showed that United States and South Korean forces are being choked or pushed back around virtually the entire perimeter of the United Nations defense lines.

But the withdrawal is orderly and planned. This can be told by one observation: You can fly over truck convoys and see that those going up to the front are empty and those coming back from the front are full—of soldiers.

They were pulling back for what perhaps is physically the best defensive barrier they have yet had. The winding Naktong is deeper and wider than the Kum River where one American battalion north of Taejon alone held the enemy for three days on a 10-mile front.

High hills offer a commanding advantage over any enemy who might try to ford the river along most of its length. And thousands of native Koreans could be seen digging gun positions that will give a hot welcome to invaders if they crack against the line reinforced by fresh Marines and the newly arrived Second Infantry Division.

From Kumchon in an 80-mile arc sweeping southward to Chinju on the south coast the battleline could be followed by a string of flaming villages.

It is along this entire arc that the Reds have been probing for a knockout punch that might win them all Korea and drive the Americans into the sea before members of the United Nations can send over promised troops.

The most hopeful sight was in the Chinju area. There American troops backed up to within 45 miles of Pusan, the chief Red goal, suddenly lashed out in a double pronged counterattack. One attack conked out along the Chinju-Pusan road. The other appeared from the air to be progressing.

The Americans were going forward—but at a price. The Red Cross ambulance mark could be seen on many vehicles coming back from the front.

Hungarian Deserters Report Soviet Has Taken Over Army

Subotica, Yugoslavia, Aug. 2 (U.P.)—Residents of this border city today said that four companies of Hungarian border guards deserted with full equipment to join Yugoslav troops last week "because the Russians have taken over."

When asked if everything was calm in the area, several prominent members of the community told the same story without any prompting—that last Wednesday 220 Hungarian border guards crossed the frontier near Horgos, 19 miles east of here, and surrendered. Last Saturday, they said, an additional 70 Hungarian guards repeated the same action at Horgos.

Immediate confirmation of the story was impossible. Local officials of the Ministry of Interior in this predominantly Hungarian city only 12 miles from the border on the main rail line between Budapest and Belgrade disclaimed any knowledge of the incidents. They said that it would be an army affair. Army sources were unavailable.

According to those who professed to have seen the Hungarians, they were taken immediately by the army to Novi Sad, capital of this Province of Vojvidina, Yugoslavia's breadbasket.

They reported that the Hungarians told the Yugoslavs that the Soviet army had taken complete control of the Hungarian army and that it had specifically taken over the area immediately adjacent to Yugoslavia.

Real Estate Loans Reported at New Highs

The building boom sent real estate loans up 18 million dollars to a record high during the week ended July 26, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

A report showed that real estate loans totaled $4,794,000,000, as compared with $4,776,000,000 in the previous week and $4,141,000,000 on July 27, 1949.

Business loans also were up. They totaled $13,911,000,000 on July 26, a rise of 120 million dollars for the week and a boost of $1,025,000,000 over the figure for July 27, 1949.

Subversives Hit by Senate Group Actions

The Senate Judiciary Committee voted yesterday to arm the Government with broad powers to crack down on subversive aliens who are ordered deported as well as foreign countries that refuse to take them back.

Spurred by the Korean war and possible threats of espionage and sabotage, the committee approved three antisubversive measures, including one to permit the Justice Department to jail such alien deportees for as long as six months.

The latter bill was prompted by the case of Gerhart Eisler, German-born Communist who fled the country aboard the Polish liner Batory while free on bond.

The committee acted after Representative Francis J. Walter (D., Pa.) introduced legislation to require American Communists to register with the Justice Department as foreign agents. His action foreshadowed a possible move to substitute the measure for the tougher Mundt-Ferguson bill.

Another House member, Representative E. E. Cox (D., Ga.), introduced a measure that would outlaw domestic Communists entirely and subject them to stiff fines and prison sentences if they keep their party cards.

The Justice Department now has no authority to jail aliens who cannot find havens in other countries. Under the bill approved yesterday, they could be imprisoned for six months, after which a three-man Federal Court would decide whether to extend the prison sentence or free the alien under a strict parole.

The other two closely related bills would:

1. Permit the United States to suspend immigration quotas of any country that refuses to accept a national deported by the United States as a subversive.

2. Establish a new division of visas and passports in the State Department headed by an official who would have to be confirmed by the Senate. The division would maintain close contact with the FBI and Central Intelligence Agency.

Kri Kri will be met at Union Station at 2 p. m. and ride down F street on a decorated flat truck. The agrimi has been spending a spell in New York in quarantine since arriving from Greece.

Senate Unit Approves VA Hospital Measure

A Senate welfare subcommittee approved yesterday the House-passed bill for constructions of new Veterans Administration hospitals and additions to old ones.

The hospital projects, to provide an additional 16,000 VA hospital beds, are the ones cancelled by President Truman in January, 1949. They include the long-proposed new VA hospital here, now scheduled for erection on land acquired from the United States Soldiers' Home.

Rider Giving Loan to Spain Opposed by State Department could use if there is a Russian attack in Europe.

Secretary Acheson said he didn't know about Bridges proposal, but pointed out that a proposal of that kind would have to be taken up with our allies. He said it could not be decided unilaterally.

In saying that the State Department was not opposed to a loan to Spain if it could be justified on sound business grounds, he recalled a letter he wrote to Senator Connally (D., Tex.) last January. In this he listed some of the steps Spain would have to take before she were regarded as a good risk.

These included acceptance of a treaty of friendship, commerce and navigation offered by the United States; a simplification of its foreign exchange system and its controls on imports and exports, and a lifting of the Spanish government's restriction of 25 percent on the participation of foreign investors in any Spanish enterprise.

Criticizes Malik

Acheson, commenting on the dramatic debate in the United Nations Security Council on Tuesday, remarked that Malik, the Soviet representative, had put himself in the unique position of having his government violate its obligation whatever it does.

Malik's walkout and absence of six months, Acheson said, was a violation of Russia's obligation as a U. N. member. Another violation came, he said, when Malik returned and, as presiding officer, sought to block U. N. action in restoring peace in Korea.

Asked to speculate on future Russian moves, Acheson smiled and recalled a remark by Charles E. (Chip) Bohlen, State Department expert on Russia. Bohlen said once that there were two famous sets of last words: "Liquor doesn't affect me," and "I understand the Russians."

Spanish Reaction

In Spain, according to a United Press dispatch, news of the Senate's action in voting for the $100 million dollar loan was regarded as belated recognition of Spain's long battle against communism.

Spanish military circles expressed the belief that Spain's strategic position in case of war and her potential in manpower were deciding factors.

The Catholic newspaper Ya said that whether the loan gets final congressional and White House approval, "the truth is that our political attitude has made headway."

"Spain," the newspaper added, "today is the moral creditor of the western world. The imminent danger is removing blindfolds."

Delegate Spurns Soviet Move

U. S. Rejects Korea 'Deals'

any proposals for peace he desired under the Korean heading that has been before the Council since the war began June 25. He concluded with a welcome back to Malik, who ended a long boycott of the Council yesterday, and a wish for the "sincere collaboration" by the Soviet Union in the Council's work.

Malik called the Council to order at 3:12 p. m. (EDT), and ordered the French translation of his speech yesterday. In that statement, he argued for approval of a work sheet listing first the question of admitting Red China to the U. N. and second the "peaceful settlement of the Korean question."

Malik said yesterday he was willing to list Austin's item, the "complaint of aggression upon the Republic of Korea," but after those two items he proposed. Austin countered that Malik was trying to wipe off the Council records all reference to North Korean aggression.

In his short statement today, Austin said:

"The act of aggression against the Republic of Korea is the most urgent business before the United Nations. Under this agenda item, every member of the Council is completely free to make proposals leading toward the termination of the breach of the peace. If any delegate has proposals to make or resolutions to submit regarding the breach of the peace in Korea they can be made within the framework of the agenda item which has been before this Council for the last five weeks. If there are proposals to be made, refusal to present them within the Council's regular agenda inevitably will cast doubt on their sincerity.

"As I stated yesterday, the United States cannot agree that the question of Chinese representation can take precedence over the fact of armed aggression. Nor can the United States agree that the termination of aggression be made contingent on any other issue. So long as men are dying on the battlefield in defense of the United Nations, this Council will not wish to cheapen their suffering or sully their heroism by seeming to engage in the consideration of deals."

The text of Austin's statements, made available in advance, ended the last passage with "deals, bribery or blackmail." Austin omitted "bribery or blackmail" in his delivery.

Clergy Labels Aggression 'Greatest Menace'

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—Jewish, Protestant and Roman Catholic leaders declared jointly today that aggression such as has embroiled Korea in war constitutes the "greatest menace to world peace."

They warned against the so-called Stockholm appeal as a "spurious peace petition."

The statement was issued jointly by officers of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the National Catholic Welfare Conference, and the Synagogue Council of America.

The statement said "peace requires of every people" the following:

"1. Renunciation of the use of war or threats of force as an instrument of national policy.

"2. Loyal adherence to the solemn obligations of the United Nations charter for the maintenance of international peace and security and the peaceful settlement of disputes.

"3. Respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all.

"4. Participation in positive programs of the United Nations for the common welfare and better standards of life.

"5. Acceptance of international agreements for the effective reduction and regulation of armaments, including atomic weapons, by all nations, through a trustworthy system of international inspection and control."

Signers of the statement included: the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Frederick G. Hochwalt, and the Rev. Raymond A. McGowan, both of Washington.

College President Supports Merger Of Small Schools

Massanetta Springs, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—Dr. Sam S. Hill, president of Georgtown College of Kentucky, told the Baptist Assembly here today that the greatest failure of the twentieth century is the failure of Christian education.

He said denominations have tried to maintain too many small institutions and therefore have failed to have sufficient funds for large and strong schools. He urged the consolidation of the many small institutions into strong denominational colleges.

Dr. Hill denounced the use of State and Federal funds for religious institutions and urged Baptists to support their colleges.

3 Employers Fined For Improper Records

Three employers were fined yesterday in Municipal Court for failing to keep proper time records in violation of the District of Columbia minimum wage or women's hours laws.

They are Charles Thurtell, of the Devonshire Restaurant, 4243 Wisconsin ave., fined $20; J. J. Stein, Atlas Investment Corp., and J. & J. Investment Corp., fined $25; and Xenephon Zuppas, Palace Restaurant, 935 Pennsylvania ave. nw., fined $20.

Vishinsky Reported Back in Moscow

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 2 (AP).—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, whose movements have been a mystery in recent months, was reported back in Moscow today.

The Prague Socialist newspaper Svobodne Slovo said he attended a reception there yesterday "on the twenty-third anniversary of the founding of the Chinese National Liberation (Communist) Army."

He was reported to have spent two months in the West Bohemian spa of Karlovy Vary.

With Explosives

Leopold's Supporters Show Anger

Brussels, Aug. 2 (AP).—Pro-Leopold Flanders showed its ire today over the solution of Belgium's royal question as a committee of ministers started work on a bill to transfer King Leopold's powers to his son, Crown Prince Baudouin.

The Belgian tricolored flag, which had been flown at half-staff in French-speaking Wallonia in protest against Leopold's return from exile July 22, was lowered to half-staff in Dutch-speaking Flanders because Leopold was stepping aside.

Flemish wholesalers refused to sell vegetables to Walloon buyers at Malines. A pro-Leopold action committee was formed at Turnhout to organize resistance.

Small explosive charges were slipped into the letter boxes of several Socialist organizations in Antwerp and detonated. The Socialists spearheaded the demonstrations that led Leopold to promise he would transfer the royal powers to his son.

Another small bomb blew in a door of the home of Franz van Cauwelaert, a moderate Social Christian who is president of the Chamber of Deputies. The Social Christians engineered the return of the King, but gave ground in the face of widespread disorders.

The pro-Leopold newspaper Libre Belgique railed against what it called the "capitulation" of the Social Christian government. Headlines spoke of "the humiliating day of July 31," in which the shift was arranged.

With Socialist-led strikes ended, most of Belgium was back to normal today.

The government bill to make Baudouin the ruler is expected to be ready for Parliament Friday.

The First Fifty Years

IN AKRON, OHIO, on August third, nineteen hundred, my father founded The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company. This year we celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of that historic event.

In those fifty years, our Company has grown from a small, abandoned foundry building with a working force of twelve men to a world-wide organization of more than seventy thousand people whose high-quality products are known and respected everywhere.

From the Firestone organization have come many developments that have made transportation history. These include the first mechanically-fastened straight-side tire which was the forerunner of the type now in universal use; the first commercial demountable rim which has now become the demountable wheel; the first angular rubber non-skid tread which is now a safety feature of all pneumatic tires; the first practical pneumatic tractor tire which led to putting the farm on rubber; and the first balloon tire which has now been developed into the present-day super-balloon.

Our Company was the first to use racing tire construction principles in regular production tires; the first to manufacture synthetic rubber tires for airplanes and passenger cars; and the first to establish one-stop service stations where car owners could get in one place all of the products and services needed to keep their cars in safe driving condition.

In 1918, father pioneered the "Ship-by-Truck" movement which gave impetus to the development of the trucking industry. He was a leader in the "Good Roads" movement which led to the construction of our nation-wide system of highways.

He waged successful battles against tire and rim monopolies in the United States. And, under the banner, "Americans Should Produce Their Own Rubber," he fought against the international cartels which attempted to control the output, distribution and price of rubber. As a result, the Firestone Rubber Plantations were established in the West African Republic of Liberia, and during the war these plantations were one of the few sources of natural rubber available to the allied nations.

These are but a few of the many important contributions which the Firestone organization has made to the progress of transportation and of civilization during its fifty years of service. This remarkable record of achievement was made possible by those millions of customers both past and present whose loyalty and friendship we value so highly; by our thousands of dealers whose service to car owners has been and is so effective and efficient; and by the men and women of Firestone whose ability and skill have contributed so vitally to our continuing progress down through the years.

This record of accomplishment is substantial testimony to the superiority of the American system of competitive free enterprise which has given our people the highest standard of living in the world. Under no other system do so many benefits accrue to so many people: to the stockholders who provide the facilities, to the men and women who make and distribute the products, and to the millions of consumers who buy and use those products.

We believe that the next fifty years will bring forth even greater achievements. For example, in synthetic rubber, different formulas are constantly being created to meet specific needs. Technically speaking, synthetic rubber is a plastic and anyone acquainted with the plastic industry ceases to be amazed at the new uses developed and predicted for this material. The future uses of synthetic rubber and other plastics appear to be limitless.

New applications of rubber to insulate machinery and equipment from vibration and to absorb shocks indicate the prospect of a much enlarged market in this field. The next fifty years may bring rubber roads that will be more durable and less costly to maintain. And, in the future, foamed rubber may replace the coil spring in automobile seats, furniture and mattresses. Many manufacturers already are changing over to foamed rubber cushioning materials as fast as we are able to increase our output of this product.

Present-day tire manufacturing equipment is highly efficient, yet we constantly are working on new and improved designs, always seeking to make our machines still more economical, simpler to operate, safer and more accurate. A major project of interest to us is the conversion to new and revolutionary sources of power. Present methods of generating power may give way to atomic energy. Electronic vulcanization shows great promise. Indeed, fifty years from now, a tire manufacturing plant may bear little resemblance to the modern tire plant of today.

This year, as we celebrate the completion of half a century of service, we of the Firestone organization are looking ahead, planning ahead and working ahead so that we shall continue to uphold our tradition of always giving to those who rely on us the "Best Today, Still Better Tomorrow."

France Ups Value Of Gold Reserves

Paris, Aug. 2 (NYHT).—France revalued her 465-ton gold hoard today and earned enough francs in the process to pay off her foreign debts and reestablish the government's credit on a firm footing with the Bank of France.

The revaluation, announced after a cabinet meeting this morning, has been technically posible since the currency devaluations of last September. But it is of some political importance at this time as an indicator of increased French financial stability in the face of international tension.

The step involves an agreement between the government and the Bank of France, under which the bank will revalue its gold holdings on the basis of 349.6 francs to the dollar, with gold at $35 an ounce. The franc value of gold thus becomes 393,396.5 francs a kilogram.

Until now, the gold holdings have been valued on the basis of 119 francs to the dollar—the official rate of exchange through 1947. From the beginning of 1948 until last September 20, the exchange rate varied along the line of an average between rates quoted on official and free markets.

The upshot is that the French gold stock has increased in value by about 126,200,000,000 francs, and the amount will be used to pay off various credits extended by the Bank of France to the French treasury.

One use will be the purchase from the Exchange Stabilization Fund of 26,350,000,000 francs worth of dollars for "anticipated repayment" of American loans secured by French gold. The method and time of repayment was not made clear, but this transaction is to take care of the balance of a loan made by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in November 1947 and taken over last October by a group of private American banks.

The loan is now secured by 69 tons of French gold in New York, and this collateral will be brought back.

Rescuers Free Boy Caught in Grating

Eight-year-old William R. McMahon, 59 Hawaii ave. ne., was pried out of a tight spot yesterday by rescue squad workers when he caught his right leg between two bars of a sidewalk grating at 66 Webster st. ne.

Members of Rescue Squad No. 2 and Twelfth Precinct police put a crowbar between the two bars of the grating to pull them apart.

Turkey Reported Seeking Entry Into Pact Alliance

London, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Republic of Turkey, which links southeastern Europe with Asia, is planning to apply for membership in the North Atlantic Defense Alliance, the British Foreign Office said today.

Spofford

The Turks' intentions were disclosed orally to British Ambassador Sir Charles Noel in Ankara, a Foreign Office spokesman said. They are understood to have made similar approaches to the United States and French Ambassadors.

Turkey, with a territory of 296,107 square miles, shares a common frontier with Soviet Russia on the east. She has been receiving military aid from the United States.

12 Nations in Setup

Twelve nations now make up the North Atlantic treaty organization. They are the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands, Luxembourg, Norway, Denmark, Portugal and Iceland.

Turkey's application presumably would rank high on the agenda of the meeting of Atlantic Pact foreign ministers scheduled for next month in New York. The Foreign Office refused to say whether Britain will support the application, but Britain is already committed by a treaty to help Turkey against any armed aggression.

There was speculation here that Greece also might seek membership in the pact, but an authoritative source in Athens said the Greek cabinet has not discussed the question.

The Atlantic Pact's civilian directors—deputies to the foreign ministers of the member nations—are setting up a permanent headquarters here to speed the building of strength against aggression.

Use of Idle Plants

Under the chairmanship of Charles M. Spofford of the United States, they have already agreed on putting some idle plants in Europe into defense production. West Germany's role is still a subject for consideration.

President Truman has asked Congress for 4 billion dollars to help arm the United States' Pact allies.

Authoritative sources in Paris today said the French are preparing a proposal that the United States finance the building of a munitions industry in western Europe to equip a United Nations army.

This was described as the key in a French statement of policy on the best means to stave off the possibility of Russia's overrunning Europe. The informants said the proposal will be handed to Spofford Thursday or Friday for relay to President Truman.

Safe Milk

The new milk sanitation regulation approved by the District Commissioners is either a proper safeguard or a polite evasion of the issue, depending on how you look at it. We think it is the latter. The Commissioners agree that chemical sterilization of utensils on dairy farms should be permitted, but they also insist that it is difficult to inspect the chemical process properly. Hence they stipulate that the steam sterilization process—now used by members of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which has been fighting liberalization of the code—must receive preference on scorecards. How much higher rating steam is to receive is the neat problem dumped in the lap of the health officer, Dr. Daniel Seckinger. Incidentally, Dr. Seckinger had argued for a regulation placing each sterilization process on an equal footing.

There is no denying that Washington has enjoyed good quality milk under the steam process. It is possible, too, that a producer who wanted to evade the regulation could do so more easily with the chemical process than with steam. Nevertheless, the chemical process is used satisfactorily in other cities, and it is approved by the United States Public Health Service. It is the job of the Health Department to make sure that regulations are obeyed and to proscribe offenders. If health authorities are satisfied that chemical sterilization is safe and can be policed properly, then their opinion should govern. Regulations should be designed to protect the public, and not any producer group with a vested interest in one particular process.

Stymied Planning

The necessity of planning for the defense of Washington against possible attack from the air gives a new urgency to the bill to reorganize the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The measure was long ago passed by the Senate. Several clarifying amendments have been approved by a House subcommittee, but the bill still awaits action by the House District Committee. Meanwhile the commission is without a chairman and deprived of the powers needed to make city planning in the area of the Nation's Capital really effective.

One of the chief purposes back of the bill is to expand the scope of the commission's activity in keeping with the growth of the Capital. The seat of the Federal Government is no longer confined to the District of Columbia; it extends into the adjacent counties of both Maryland and Virginia. Accordingly, the bill would add to the commission a member of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission and a member of the Northern Virginia Regional Planning Commission; also a member to be nominated by the District Commissioners. The representative of the Forest Service would be dropped, and new seats would be created for the Architect of the Capitol and the Administrator of General Services. The enlarged commission would be charged with the planning in connection with any Federal project within a radius of 50 miles from Washington. As this is the area within which it is proposed to scatter essential war-time agencies, the importance of getting the commission into efficient working order can be readily appreciated.

Incidentally, the name of the commission would be changed to concentrate attention upon its major function. It would become the National Capital Planning Commission. Its chief duty would be to prepare "a comprehensive, consistent, and coordinated plan for the development of the National Capital and its environs," with special attention to highways, bridges, parks, recreation areas, public buildings, monuments, airports, parking areas, public utilities and so forth. To be sure, the NCPPC has had this function on a less extensive scale. However, it has lacked authority to make its planning effective in many instances. The bill in question would place Federal and District agencies under definite obligation to consult with the commission prior to the preparation of construction plans for public improvements. And each project would have to be approved by the commission as to location, height, size and bulk of buildings, open space around the buildings and general land use, unless the construction had been specifically approved by act of Congress.

In fairness to the District the relatively small appropriation for the commission would be transferred from the District to the Federal budget. The cost of planning the Nation's Capital should never have been imposed upon local taxpayers, anyway, and it would be out of the question to ask District residents to pay for national planning in Maryland and Virginia. By far the strongest argument for the bill, however, is the need for rescuing the commission from its suspended animation. The planning body needs a new chairman as well as new powers, and the President is doubtless reluctant to fill the present vacancy until the bill has become law.

Standby Controls

As a precautionary measure it may be desirable to give the President powers to impose consumer rationing and price and wage controls. This the President has now recognized. But he insists—rightly—that it be left to his discretion to decide when to invoke such powers and where to apply them. If this country should become involved in a full-scale war requiring all-out mobilization of its resources, a comprehensive control system like that advocated by Mr. Baruch would undoubtedly be essential. However, the partial mobilization in prospect does not call for immediate resort to such extreme measures.

We greatly fear that the public has been led to believe that an immediate freezing of prices—and possibly wages—would put a stop to hoarding and price gouging. This would not be the case. Suppose that prices were to be frozen at present levels or at the levels prevailing immediately before the Korean outbreak. The result would be widespread demoralization and eventual paralysis of some industries. Manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers could keep going until their inventories were exhausted. But when they had to replace them at higher prices, some concerns would be forced to sell at a loss or go out of business.

Remember what happened when the OPA ordered a general price freeze in March 1942? It was overwhelmed by a flood of petitions for price adjustments from concerns "squeezed" between the ceiling prices of replacement supplies and other costs. Although a huge price organization had been built up by that time, and an industrial allocation and priority system had been in operation for many months, that price freeze resulted in gross inequities and delayed for a long time the introduction of an improved system of dollars and cents pricing.

At present there is no price control agency prepared to tackle the job of maintaining retail price ceilings, and the American people, who have never taken kindly to economic regimentation, would have good cause to turn against an Administration that prematurely attempted to enforce such controls. Moreover, price rollbacks are practically impossible to effect, and even if prices were rolled back to a fixed date, the prices of some commodities would still be too low or too high with reference to the general price level.

Wage stabilization presents even more knotty problems—political as well as economic. Unless organized labor agreed to support the proposal, strikes would follow and production would be retarded. Effective control over food prices at retail levels is also impracticable without radical modification of agricultural price-support laws. All these changes would, we believe, be accepted by industrial wage earners and farmers, if the necessity arose, but the experiences of World War II are proof that a section of the public resents and resists direct consumer control measures even under conditions of extreme danger. OPA's struggle with meat rationing is a case in point. Retail meat prices were controlled, to be sure, but meat "disappeared" and consumers unwilling to pay exorbitant black market prices had to be content with meats of very inferior quality, or no meat at all.

What we need at the moment is time—time to assess the effectiveness of the President's restricted control program; time to discover how great a strain the armaments program is going to put on the economy; and time for the Administration to build up an organization that will provide a basis for a more comprehensive control program, if it eventually becomes necessary to invoke the standby control powers that Congress is now considering.

Convicting Gamblers

It is a serious blow to the suppression of illegal gambling in the District to have the convictions of "Snags" Lewis and Frank Billeci reversed by the Court of Appeals. Nonetheless, it is impossible not to applaud the scholarship which characterizes the unanimous opinion delivered by Judge Prettyman upsetting the earlier District Court action before Judge Holtzoff. The Court of Appeals decision does not mean that Lewis and Billeci are free. It does mean, however, that they are entitled to a new trial because of the erroneous interpretations of the law made by Judge Holtzoff in instructing the jury. And, whatever the disappointment over the reversal, it is a refreshing thing to have this fundamental safeguard of the American judicial system demonstrated anew.

There were a good many extenuating circumstances in the trial of Lewis, Billeci and Attilio Acalotti which ended in convictions in January. Many attempts were made by the defense to impugn a Government witness, and while the jury was out during its 35½-hour deliberation, two jurors disclosed that they had received intimidating telephone calls. These factors no doubt influenced Judge Holtzoff when he instructed the jury:

> In a criminal case the court cannot peremptorily instruct the jury to find the defendant guilty. If the law permitted it, I would do so in this case . . . A failure by you to bring in a verdict in this case can arise only from a willful and flagrant disregard of the evidence and the law as I have given it to you, and a violation of your obligation as jurors.

This, the Court of Appeals notes sharply, was based on an erroneous interpretation of the Horning case, in which a similar instruction was permissible only because there was no dispute over facts. In the current case there was vigorous contest over facts. Further, the Court of Appeals rapped Judge Holtzoff for failing to make clear the qualification of "reasonable doubt" and for permitting the inference that the failure of the defense to call additional witnesses meant that their testimony would have been unfavorable to the defense. Particularly impressive is the summation:

> It is a serious thing for an appellate court to reverse convictions in criminal cases. But the controlling importance is that the law be followed. The rules of law applicable to the function of the judge in a criminal trial by jury are well settled. No matter what the impulse may be to transgress or evade them under provocative circumstances, they must be observed. This is basic, without exception, and compulsory.

Where this leaves the prosecution as respects a new trial is, of course, a moot question. Such a trial at best will be extraordinarily difficult to arrange because of the abuse to which the chief witness was subjected the last time. But the reversal is a salient reminder that the functions of prosecutor and judge are properly separate, and that whenever a judge allows his own opinions of guilt to influence his rulings, he actually harms the prosecution's case.

Spanish Omelet

That the enemy of your enemy is your friend is the theory which gives plausibility to the Senate resolution to lend 100 million dollars to Franco's Spain. But it is a theory entertained only by primitive minds, and is utterly at variance with logic or commonsense. Worse, in the present case the illusion is terribly harmful, for the vote will alienate many of our true friends, and will erode our moral standing all over free Europe. Whether the theory had much to do with the Senate vote is problematical. What is known is that many elements conspired to tack Spain onto the beneficiaries of Marshall aid without benefit of theory. A wing of the Catholic Church has never ceased to plug financial aid for Franco, though Vatican-Madrid relations are not exactly cordial. For the last year or so cotton interests, thinking of business with Franco, have joined the backers. Then the military, worrying over beachheads in Europe, have never hidden their views about the need for a friendly Spain, though the anticommunism of Franco surely requires no activation along the route of bribery. Finally, sparking the whole campaign, a Spain lobby has been subjecting members of Congress to tremendous pressure, concentrating of late upon the Republicans, and indulging in much the same tactics as the China lobby practices.

At any time, of course, the Spanish government could apply for a loan to the Export-Import Bank. But the Bank sets certain criteria, such as a reasonable prospect of repayment, which the loan lobby knows that Madrid could not meet. That is the reason for this extraordinary alternative. If the vote is allowed to stand, ECA will presumably set up a mission in Madrid and proceed to invite Franco's government to offer a program of requirements. It will be an isolated mission. ECA cannot expect to get its European opposite number, the Organization of European Economic Cooperation to participate, for the members of OEEC have already refused to open their door to admit Franco, and are bound to resent the pressure of America back of Franco. This has long been known to the Administration. Why, then, was it so apathetic toward the loan proposal? The surmise is that it felt any further struggle to be useless. At least, however, there should have been a reminder of what the vote would mean in terms of damaged prestige.

From the first, this newspaper has never been in favor of the severance of ambassadorial relations. But "recognition" is one thing, financial aid of the present official character, another. The one merely takes cognizance of a fact, the other is a special favor, and, in the context of the existing absence of ambassadorial relations, looks ludicrous. But the sinister aspect of the vote is the harm that will be done in western Europe to the American standing. A week or so ago much disquiet was expressed in the Senate over the success of Soviet propaganda against America. The theme song is America's alleged antidemocracy. In this respect the vote on the loan to Spain was as good as an appropriation of many times the loan to the publicity chest of Moscow. It will be played up as proof of the mockery of the democratic pretensions of America; surely that is patent enough. This is a heavy price to pay for bribing the enemy of your enemy to be your friend.

Round And Round

A wartime institution that has been—er—reactivated is the famous Washington runaround. Mr. James Reston of the New York Times appears to have been getting quite a workout in the corridors and offices of the State Department in his attempts to explain to his readers (who, it appears have a vulgar curiosity about such matters) just what the diplomats have been thinking and saying and doing about Korea for these last half dozen years. Or to put it in Mr. Reston's language:

> No real effort is being made to release or expose the basic documents that would provide an accurate story of United States Korean policy from the time of the Cairo Conference to the movement of the Communist attack across the thirty-eighth parallel.

Meanwhile, the rest of us—who are rather less energetic in this weather than Mr. Reston—are somewhat in the state of mind of the constituent who called upon his Congressman wearing a large button inscribed H. I. A. K.

"What's that thing you're wearing, Mr. Jones?" said the Congressman pleasantly. "Some kind of fraternity pin?"

"Oh, no. Just a little notion of my own. Those letters stand for 'How I am confused.'"

"But 'confused' isn't spelled with 'k.'"

"Well," said Mr. Jones. "It just shows you how confused I am."

"This Is The Break That Makes Up For Everything!"

Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

"GIs And Gooks"

Your "GIs and Gooks" editorial of July 30 was timely and pertinent, but it misses the issue entirely by placing the blame on "lads drawn from American factories and farms." Also, the term "gook" is not unique in World War II or the Korean action. It is of the class of scurrilous epithets such as "gooney," "spik," "kike," "wop," "smoke," etc. These, historically, are used by the intellectually immature and by those suffering chronic inferiority complexes or from social snobbishness.

The point that you missed is that this reprehensible practice is preserved, not by temporary GIs and sailors, but by the regular members of our military and foreign services. That we of the United States are possibly less at fault in this than are the British and French is no excuse for those of our regular services who thoughtlessly or maliciously use these terms. That those of our regular diplomatic and military personnel who use them are a minority is still less an excuse, for these horrible examples are seized upon by those who are anxiously looking for just such conduct for political purposes, and by the newcomers to the services who are eager to establish themselves as "seasoned" personnel.

It is particularly distressing to hear these terms used by the wives and children of both officers and enlisted men on foreign stations. Few of them realize the damage they do to our good name.

The corrective action here should start from the top down not from the bottom up.

NELL ABERNATHY.
Washington.

May I suggest another etymological interpretation of "gooks" referred to in your editorial of July 30?

Koreans usually call the United States "Mee Gook" in which "mee" means the abbreviated pronunciation of America and "gook" means country. The word "gook" was so frequently caught by GI ears that many GI's apparently came to use the term in reverse to designate Koreans.

KOREAN STUDENT.
Washington.

Cause Of Hoarding

It seems to me that the American public is at present more confused than alarmed. While we get assurances from reliable Government sources that food and all essential commodities are plentiful, and while the press, television and radio admonish the public of the evil of hoarding, many manufacturers swiftly and bluntly increase prices daily.

The consumer is therefore left in a dilemma and is rushing to stock up with items at the then prevailing prices for the sole purpose of saving money rather than hoarding. This results in an abnormal run for these particular items. It naturally depletes the normal supply from the retailers' shelves thereby creating an artificial demand for those items from the wholesalers and manufacturers.

This vicious cycle is now prevalent in every town and village of our United States.

Does it not seem paradoxical to appeal to the consumer without stopping the evil at its source, i.e. by not allowing the manufacturer to raise prices at this time.

Hoarding is only a psychologic symptom and not a sickness. It shows that somewhere something is wrong. This particular symptom can easily be corrected by attacking its origin. In this case it is the manufacturer and wholesaler who are primarily interested in more profits. They do so openly and flagrantly without any consideration for the Government or the public.

"Social Security"

Permit me to thank you for your very fine editorial of July 28 on "Social Security," calling attention to some of the good features and also some of the defects in the bill as agreed upon by the Senate-House conferees. Few newspapers have done as good a job as you have on the omission of payments of benefits to persons permanently and totally disabled. Many of these persons have paid into social security funds for many years and have reached the age of 60, have seen service in world wars and are unable to earn a living, and are now faced with increased living costs. We now have in our midst another group of "forgotten men." Senator Taft suggests public assistance (charity) and I agree with your editorial that this certainly cannot be the answer.

In this unjust legislation, perpetrated against persons who have paid for as much as 10 years into social security funds, there is a choice morsel for Communist propaganda. I hope some of your readers will write their Senators protesting the deletion of the provision passed by the House for payment of benefits to the totally and permanently disabled under H. R. 6000. L. Baruch Plan

How can we make our President feel the urgency of accepting Baruch's plan for total mobilization? No intelligent individual can be blind to the fact that Korea is not the only source of danger; Berlin, Formosa, Indonesia, Malaya are but a few of imminent spots of trouble. We are only too aware of the present infirmity of our defense. Time is running out. Our men are dying, being pushed around because of past policies of our weak, shortsighted Administration. We cannot continue to allow these policies to shape our action.

We, the people, are ready to sacrifice, tighten our belts, for we know there is no choice if we are to remain free and maintain Christian principles in this world. How can we make our President aware he must heed the wisdom of men of the stature of Baruch rather than the petty politicians with whom he has surrounded himself?

Segregated Water

The July 31 letter on "Segregated Water" signed by Colored Mother makes me see red. Is it possible that such a thing could happen? Was none of the people this mother asked for water for her thirsty little boy a Christian reared on the philosophy of giving a cup of water to "the least of these, my children"?

It has always seemed to me unfair and unjust that while I sat at a counter for a quick snack at a drug store or similar eating place, hard-working colored men and women had to stand at one end or take their purchases out. There are people unpleasant to sit beside, but in my experience as many of them are white as black.

It has seemed futile to express dissent at such an established system; but the refusal of a drink of water to a thirsty child . . .

Wedge In Korea

If an outsider may offer some points of consideration to the planners of military and political strategy, let me call their attention to a few things in connection with Korea.

It is the equipment of the North Koreans and their morale that have to be defeated. Where do both come from? A silly question. Russian-made Yaks and T-34 tanks didn't go through the Marshall Plan, neither are they imitations made in North Korea, just as the fighting morale isn't manufactured there. While the United States has to conquer half a globe of sea miles in addition to unpreparedness, the Politburo sits back and watches the tanks, guns, mortars, ammunition, planes and "morale" roll right over the Soviet-Korean border, if there is such a thing.

It seems to me that the thing to do would be to throw a wedge between the fighting Korean forces and the Politburo.

It is 120 miles air distance from the Korean Bay to the Gulf of Korea, along the Fortieth Parallel. For well-equipped United States amphibious troops it would take only a night or two to run across the mainland, probably completely unguarded. A move like this would spread an American carpet between Moscow and the North Korean army, through which the Soviet might be unwilling to pour supplies.

In a short time this American zone could possibly be extended as far north as the Soviet-North Korean border, and in case international Communist brigades were sent to Korea, they would have to start fighting on Soviet territory, which might be too inconvenient to the new Soviet chairman of the U. N. Security Council.

An American strip across the middle of North Korea would absolutely ruin the fighting morale of the Korean Communists. What keeps that morale going now, is the gain of territory, the Soviet supplies, the self-assuredness of the North Korean Communist leaders, and the outstretched hand of the Politburo. As soon as this could be changed to a position between two Yank fires—sea on both sides, grinding up equipment, knocked out supplies, retreat and fleeing Communist leaders—the Korean war could be reconverted to a police action of the U. N.

All the North Korean leaders should be tried on criminal charges against humanity before a U. N. court. The ones that helped the Soviet to engineer the aggression should receive capital punishment. If, during the trial, it can be wormed out of them that the directing hand behind their attack was the Soviet Union, the propaganda and information agencies of the U. N. and of the free governments of the world should make it their responsibility that every ear, especially those of the Communist leaders of the satellite countries, would hear plenty about it. This should be done for the purpose of both snatching off the veil from the "peacemaking" Soviet face, and teaching a lesson to those satellite Communist leaders who might be intended for further Communist aggression.

Right People For Point IV

By Malvina Lindsay

Human 'Know-How'

ABOUT 10 YEARS ago a nervous representative of the United States Children's Bureau sat before a traditionally terrifying congressional Appropriations Committee trying to justify a $15,000 request in the State Department's budget for the Inter-American program of the bureau. On hearing that under this program one child welfare consultant would be assigned to Brazil, a country larger than the United States, underdeveloped in many areas, with difficult communications, one committee member swept his palm across the long mahogany table in front of him, and exclaimed: "What can one lo-o-o-ne woman do in that va-a-a-st country down there?"

His answer has come through the years in the outstanding work of Miss Rose Alvernaz, for whose services virtually every state in Brazil is now clamoring. Miss Alvernaz is one of those trail-blazers for Point IV that the Children's Bureau, the State Department and other Federal agencies have been sending out now for about 15 years. They have been heralds of a new slowly emerging foreign policy which recognizes that every nation benefits from the progress of the rest, and conversely suffers from other nations' backward standards.

The great influence these carefully chosen bearers of "know-how" in health, nursing, child and maternity care, education, are wielding in their areas emphasizes the importance of having the right people administer the Point IV program. For no matter how much or how little money is put into it, it will be just as good as its personnel.

BUT, IT MAY be objected, Point IV is concerned only with technical aid. However, as the Educational Policies Commission recently pointed out in a study of the educational aspects of the program, the proposed technical aid will bring great changes to many communities. The people affected, says the commission, must be prepared to "understand and live under the complicated and dynamic conditions which always accompany the advance of science and technology."

Hence Americans carrying out their part of the program should be especially prepared, not only in technical skill, but in understanding of the people and interests of the countries in which they work. The commission suggests that in selection of such persons the rich ethnic resources of this country be utilized.

Possibly one of the reason Rose Alvernaz's fame as a child welfare emissary for the United States has spread through Brazil and beyond is that she is a first generation American of Portuguese parentage from California. And the value abroad of the technician who is a well rounded human being is brought out in a recent report to the Secretary of State from the American Embassy in Lima concerning Miss Elizabeth Clarke, another Children's Bureau "ambassador." It says that Miss Clarke, "because of her personality, thorough knowledge of her specialty, good knowledge of Spanish, easy adaptability and understanding nature, may be considered the American specialist who has made the most important and lasting contribution to our cultural effort in Peru during 1949."

THE POINT IV program will also include bringing foreign people here to learn American techniques. In this, too, much pioneering has been done through the inter-American programs of Federal agencies by means of fellowships, scholarships, tours of observation.

What are some of the lessons learned by this foreign contact experience? For one thing, that we should send the best in human material we have to these underdeveloped areas, since such "infiltration" may bear fruit for years to come. These experts should be persons of maturity and flexibility as well as knowledge, also adaptable and broad-visioned, seeing economic development of backward areas in its broader human and world aspects.

And those who teach and work with foreigners coming to this country will need to bear in mind the backgrounds and resources of the visitors and not overwhelm them with only the "biggest and best" in technical or social methods.

Another thing the trail-blazing of Point IV has taught is that Americans who share their knowledge must avoid at all costs the attitude of arrogance so generally associated in underdeveloped areas with colonial exploitation. Since any culture has something to give others, an exchange of experience should be possible, and should be diligently sought for in the administration of the Point IV program.

Surplus Food

The Department of Agriculture and the American farmer rank almost as high in my opinion as enemies of the American way of life as does any Russian-inspired Communist! Our Government already owns 107 million pounds of dried eggs! Today I paid 71 cents for a dozen eggs. I read that we are going to keep up this price support by buying eggs to store through the month of September.

If the armed forces could use some of this surplus produce and save some of that $5000 per year per man it takes to pay, feed and clothe a soldier or sailor they would have that much more to buy arms for him.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Churchill's Estimate

JUST before it adjourned last week Parliament had a discussion, in which Mr. Churchill took the leading part, about the strategic situation in Europe. On the facts there was no disagreement between Mr. Churchill and Mr. Shinwell, the Minister of Defense. Western Europe, they said, has almost no immediate defense if Russia decided to attack except the deterrent effect of American superiority in atomic weapons.

Lippmann

Mr. Churchill had asked for a secret session, presumably to discuss the conclusions to be drawn from this estimate of the situation. Mr. Attlee refused to have a secret session and, therefore, Mr. Churchill's views were bound to be stated cryptically: "Between having the secret and making any large number of bombs there is undoubtedly a considerable interval. It is this interval which we must not waste. We must endeavor to make up the melancholy leeway in military preparations which are pressing us today, and we must never abandon the hope that a peaceful settlement may be reached with the Soviet government if a resolute effort is made, not upon our present weakness but upon American atomic strength."

THE BRITISH picture of the European situation, as expressed publicly by the Minister of Defense and by Mr. Churchill, is in broad terms as follows: The Soviet Union has 175 active divisions which in a few months could be raised to over 300 divisions. On the assumption, which in view of the proved fighting capacity of the Chinese and of the North Koreans is optimistic, that only half of the active divisions could be used in Europe, the Russians can still "launch over 80 divisions upon us without any further mobilization."

Of the active divisions one third are said to be mechanized or armored, which would mean that at least 25 are available in the West. Mr. Churchill made an informed guess that on or near the western front the Russians had 4000 or 5000 tanks "in organized formations." Against this he said that the British, the French, the Belgians and the Americans have a total of 12 divisions, of which less than two are armored, against anything from 25 to 30 on the Russian side. The odds against us in ground troops on the western front are, on the British figures, at least 4 to 1 and it may be as much as 9 to 1 . . . the tactical air position is not much better, and at sea, said Mr. Churchill, "it is probably true to say that the Russian U-boat menace to our transocean lifeline and world communications, covering all American reinforcements for Europe, would be far more severe than were the German U-boats in 1939 and 1940, and that seemed quite enough then."

MR. CHURCHILL'S estimate is grim, so grim that its effect on the Continent will be profoundly demoralizing unless the United States can convince the people of the Continent (1) that we are prepared to commit all our resources and (2) that we intend to commit them primarily to reinforcing our own deterrent power and (3) that we shall use the deterrent power we have and all that we can add to it, to support a policy which is neither appeasement nor a demand for Russian unconditional surrender, but is a policy of settlement by negotiation on the principle of the coexistence of the Communist orbit and of the Atlantic community.

A maximum effort to achieve greater military power quickly is imperative. But, on the British estimate of the strategic situation, our maximum effort will not be enough to achieve the security of the Atlantic community unless it is focused and directed rightly so as to be deterrent, and unless our diplomatic objectives are reduced to realizable proportions.

THE EUROPEAN picture, as drawn by Mr. Churchill, and our own experience in Korea prove conclusively that while we have the power to deter the Soviet Union, we do not have the power to contain all the revolutionary forces around the periphery of the Soviet Union. The Pentagon has always known that. The policy of containment was dreamed up by civilians. A strategy of military containment is, for a country or an alliance that is numerically inferior, nonsense. Thus it may be possible for 80 men to surround and contain 12 men. But 12 men cannot surround and contain 80 men. This truism is being given a fearful demonstration in South Korea, where the Americans have been unable to contain the North Koreans because there have never been enough Americans. The alternative to a strategy of containment is the strategy of the deterrent striking force. That does not mean building nothing but B-36s. It does mean the organization and the reinforcement and the continual perfecting of task forces designed to penetrate the defenses of the Soviet Union itself. The American power to strike inside the Soviet Union is what now protects Europe, which is otherwise virtually disarmed. That is what must protect Europe while it goes through the painful effort to develop some independent military power of its own against Soviet military action to interrupt European rearmament.

THERE IS every reason for thinking that this is substantially the Soviet estimate too. Their propaganda has been concentrated on an effort to neutralize our superiority in atomic weapons—on an effort to bring about American atomic disarmament. Their diplomacy has been concentrated on keeping the Atlantic community embroiled in the Far East, fighting second-class satellites in Indo-China, Malaya, and Korea. If they could manage both to disarm the United States of the only kind of weapon in which we have decisive superiority, and could at the same time involve us in a first-rate secondary war, they could begin to dictate political terms to the undefended and terrified people of Europe.

They will, of course, not succeed with their propaganda against our atomic superiority. But they stand a fair chance of diverting our main energies, which need to be focused on the defense of the Atlantic community, into difficult and expensive secondary wars that cost Russia nothing in blood and nothing in prestige, and almost nothing in treasure.

U. N. And Aggression

By Marquis Childs

Permanent Commission As A Check

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y.—Beyond the tactical maneuvering in this bitter game of chess is an avenue of hope. It is the hope the United Nations becomes a truly functional body to preserve the peace of the world.

Childs

The potential is here and now in the plans and intentions of the United States and the other non-Communist powers. The aggression in Korea has forced some thinking and some planning outside the groove of veto and defeatism in which the U. N. was stalled.

A bold plan for action has been worked out by the United States. If the tactical maneuvering over Korea and Communist China does not get in the way, it will be presented at once. This plan is for nothing less than a permanent U. N. commission empowered to inquire into aggression, threatened or real, direct or indirect, wherever it may be.

Such a commission may well be the answer to the danger of minor wars breaking out at a half-dozen tension points in various corners of the globe. These tension points—Iran, Indo-China, Yugoslavia, Greece—would all come under the U. N. umbrella. Expert observers would be on the scene before any real trouble occurred to determine the source of aggression.

Such an over-all commission would follow the pattern of the U. N. commissions for observation sent to Greece and Korea. It would have broad powers and permanent status. Such a commission could be compared to a fire alarm system, sensitive to the first whiff of smoke.

IN RECENT discussions in the State Department and in the United States delegation to the U. N. it was debated whether this should not be made the first order of business here. But on the advice of Ambassador Alexander Kirk in Moscow it was decided to hold it up at least temporarily. Korea, it was felt, should take precedence in the duel with Russian Delegate Jacob Malik.

No one has any illusions about what will happen when this plan for a permanent commission is put forward. If Russia is still sitting in the Security Council, Malik will once again use the veto.

But then the way will be open to go to the General Assembly of the U. N., and the Assembly meets next month. There is little doubt that such a plan for a permanent fire alarm system would be approved by the Assembly.

The belief here is that the United States could expect the support of those nations that have clung to a concept of neutrality. India, for example, supported the Korean commission and an Indian observer was a member of that commission. India could play a vital role on a permanent commission with broad powers to report on threats to the peace well in advance of any shooting.

KOREA has been an eye-opener for many of the neutrals. The Swedish U. N. delegate, Sven Grafstrom, is urging a permanent U. N. military force. Other member states, conspiciously Canada, have been discussing such a possibility ever since General MacArthur assumed the command of Americans and South Koreans in the name of the United Nations.

Such a permanent force made up of soldiers, sailors and airmen from all the member states is a strong probability. It would be the fire-fighting apparatus ready to go into action if and when the permanent commission of inquiry should sound a three-alarm call. This is exactly what was envisioned before the slow strangulation of the veto began to squeeze the life out of the U. N.

The veto, or a threat of it, kept military committees in long and futile months of discussion. The Soviet Union did not want a U. N. military force in being.

The hope in this new line of bold planning for action has one big question mark before it. Is there time enough? And, one must add, time enough in view of the defenselessness of the whole Western world?

The free nations have waited so long. They have waited until what seemed almost hopeless paralysis had settled in. There is only one virtue in the length of this waiting period—it is proof, if proof were needed, that the free world was willing to believe nearly to the point of self-destruction in Russia's protestations of peace and cooperation.

Members of the American delegation are now canvassing for support for the new commission. Some delegates feel it would have too much authority. This can be an end or a beginning, and there are many here who feel it is the latter.

Food Conservation Steering Unit Named

The Commissioners' Food Conservation Committee held its first meeting yesterday and appointed a steering committee to plan its work. Chairman J. Thomas Kennedy said he would probably call a meeting of the smaller group later this week.

The committee was created last week to advise the Commissioners how to stop panic buying.

'Automatic' Controls Plan Proposed by Sen. Fulbright

his scheme, more an idea than a worked-out plan. Its outlines are as follows:

A reasonable date, just before the Korean hostilities, should be picked as a base date. Then, if the level of the Bureau of Labor Statistics cost of living (consumer prices) index rose to a certain percentage above that of the base date, all prices and wages would be rolled back and frozen at the levels prevailing on the base date.

Fulbright himself thought the allowable cost of living increase should be about 6 or 7 percent. All agreed that 10 percent was too high, and less than 5 too low.

Various modifications were also discussed in committee. These included the idea of giving the President discretion to set ceilings on individual prices, if they rose too far, even in advance of the critical rise in the cost of living.

Draft to Be Reworked

The matter was left with the committee staff. It was given instructions to rewrite the Administration standby draft into simpler form, and to reduce the Fulbright proposal to legislative language.

The committee will fall to work considering the new drafts at 10 this morning. It proposes also to call before it Ewan Clague, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, to get his views on how the cost of living index could be fitted in with a price and wage control scheme.

Meantime, on the other side of the Capitol, the House set out yesterday to vote on the Administration bill containing the grant of economic control powers originally requested by the President last month.

As was planned, the Republicans offered as a substitute a bill containing some, but by no means all those powers, and in addition, a set of what the Republicans called standby price and wage-fixing regulations. The legislation was offered by Representative Kunkel (R., Pa.).

Counter Bill Offered

His bill was highly objectionable to the executive branch, principally because of its rigid administrative provisions and a series of what Democrats considered to be built-in booby traps. A principal one was a declaration of policy bidding the Administration to impose wage controls the instand it sought to apply any other control, even an allocation of a raw material, or a limitation on the production of a finished product, say a television set.

So, also as planned, the Democrats countered by offering another substitute, containing the original authority sought, plus wage and price-fixing permission on a free-wheeling basis, giving the Administration full discretion on how to run it, when to begin it, and where to apply the powers.

The Republicans, apparently believing they had no chance to pass the Kunkel bill, protested having to vote on the Democratic substitute, on grounds that they had had no time to study it. Democratic leaders acceded to their demands, putting off votes on the substitutes and amendments that may be offered until today.

GOP legislators in the House, it appeared, will seek today to remove from the Administration bill sections which they assert give the President too broad authority.

Psychological Value Claimed

The Fulbright proposal seemed to Senators considering it to have several beguiling features. Principal among them was the assumed psychological impact on businessmen.

Each seller, it was argued, would realize that if he raised his prices, it would contribute to an increase in the cost of living, and when that index reached the agreed upon top figure, all prices, including his own, would be rolled back and frozen.

This, it was thought, would be a strong deterrent to individual price rises.

Administration economists, however, took a different, and dimmer, view.

They asserted that any such enactment would require the immediate creation of a full-scale OPA organization. It would have to be on hand if and when the critical point was reached on the cost of living index.

For, it was clear, there would have to be such an organization for enforcement, policing, adjudication and principally, the granting of exemptions and modifications for the hundreds of thousands of inequities that would be bound to arise the minute a rollback and freeze occurred.

Drawbacks Cited

But, they argued, this might be a great waste, for the odds were that with the other controls the President requested, and with pay-as-you-go tax legislation, inflationary price rises could be avoided.

They also pointed out that since a large percentage of the cost of living index is based on rents and public utility and transportation costs—all relatively stable—the price of groceries as a whole might rise 10 or 15 percent without causing a 5 percent increase in the basic index.

What would happen to a producer of military equipment, they asked, if he found that the prices of some of his raw materials—perhaps imported items like tin or rubber—were increasing?

Would he dare contract to deliver his products at a higher price, adjusted in accordance with his higher costs, if he felt that some months hence there would be a rollback and he would have to accept a much lower figure for what he made? Would not, in fact, the provision therefore have a restrictive effect on defense production, executive branch economists asked.

said the vote could not be construed as a test of excess profits tax sentiment, and did not bar the way to later committee consideration.

In these other developments:

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), a member of the Senate Finance Committee, said he favors imposition of an excess-profits tax now, and will vote to add it to the Senate bill. "I favored the tax in peacetime, and certainly we should have it in wartime," Connally said.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) said the program laid down by Snyder is "inadequate" without the profits levy, and added: "Nothing it contains will prevent profiteering, as the stock market's behavior already testifies." O'Mahoney will appear before the Finance group Friday to urge his own profits-tax plan.

If the excess-profits tax fails in committee, sponsors said the fight will be carried to the floor.

The Finance Committee vote to abandon $1,010,000,000 in excise tax cuts voted by the House prior to Korean hostilities was in line with an agreement previously reached with the Administration by House and Senate tax leaders. The anticlimactic action consigned to limbo lowered taxes on jewelry, furs, cosmetics, movie admissions and many other items.

Snyder Asks TV Tax

The new tax on television sets and deep freezers was recommended by Snyder shortly before the vote.

The House had already voted to extend the present tax on household refrigerators to deep-freeze units, but had rejected the television levy.

Said Snyder: "Television now is a strong competitor with alternative forms of entertainment, such as the radio, motion pictures, and professional sporting events, all of which are subject to the Federal excise tax."

Snyder's statement, read to the committee by Thomas J. Lynch, Treasury counsel, also spelled out in detail the President's proposals to:

1. Increase individual income taxes by 2.9 billion dollars, starting in the last three months of this year, by repealing the postwar percentage cuts allowed in 1948 and 1949.

2. Increase corporation taxes by 1.5 billion dollars, retroactive for all of 1950, by lifting the top corporate rate from 38 to 45 percent, and taxing company earnings under $25,000 at 25 percent instead of 21 percent.

Snyder meanwhile moved to spike a committee effort to eliminate the retroactive feature of the corporate tax proposal.

He stressed that Congress in the past has nearly always applied corporate tax charges to the year in which the legislation was voted.

Terming it "essential" that Congress apply the increased tax to all 1950 corporate income, he said the Government would not receive any revenue from a 1951 increase until 1952 and full collections would be held up nearly two and one half years.

Color, Acting—and Stevenson

'Treasure Island' Draws on Rainbow

By Sonia Stein

THERE'S more than gold to "Treasure Island." The latest film production of Robert Louis Stevenson's adventure story of pirates and a little boy competing for a cache of buried golden doubloons, is every color there ever was. The Technicolor film, which opened yesterday morning at Keith's Theater, is like a treasure chest of precious stones, each shining in a different color.

Considering that Stevenson's tale is a tremendously gripping narrative—which the Walt Disney production follows to a shivered timber and a whisker—it's surprising that there's time to notice the color, but it is so beautiful, so delicate, so many shades of sea and sky and metal and earth, that it cannot be overlooked.

And it doesn't detract from the story itself. Long John Silver is all the more terrifying for his high color, and Jim Hawkins is all the more vulnerable—a tender boy of tender years—for the pale pink flush on his cheek. And the bounding main loses nothing in its translation to color.

So you see this deal includes a pair of aces—some of the most beautiful color photography ever shot, and certainly one of the world's most exciting adventure stories.

And there's a third ace, some excellent acting. Robert Newton, as the crafty old one-legged pirate, Long John Silver, is as conniving and two-faced an old party as ever played both ends against the middle. He has a couple of mannerisms, like winking one eye, which get a shade exasperating—but then Silver was an exasperating man. When he's making a friend of little Jim, he's all honey and charm. When he's working at his trade of pirating, he's all gall and harm. Long John is said to have been Author Stevenson's favorite creation, and I think Stevenson would have applauded Newton's interpretation long and loud.

RICHARD L. COE is on vacation. His column will be resumed on August 23.

Thirteen-year-old Bobby Driscoll, who won an academy award last year after appearing in "The Window" and "So Dear to Our Hearts," plays Jim Hawkins, the little boy who inherits a pirate map and manages one way and another to outsmart and outfight a nasty clutch of pirates who are trying to get it away from him.

The other actors are, like Newton, English hardies, since the picture was made in England for Disney.

Subtle for Toddlers

The audience was dense with kiddies yesterday, many of them squirming uneasily because some children are too young even for a children's picture. The picture is handled with too much subtlety for children under reading age, I suspect. But that makes it perfectly fine fare for all the adults and the in-betweens who like stories full of molasses-black rum, cutlasses and blood.

In addition to the pirate film, Keith's is also offering a couple of Disney cartoons which are more familiar Disney products, and the nature short, "Beaver Valley." If you've seen Disney's "Seal Island," you don't need to be told how wonderful "Beaver Valley" is. If you haven't, there's no point—it cannot be done in words at all.

But this much clew can be given: it's the real story in Technicolor of a young beaver who gets himself a wife—a widow with a child, wouldn't you know—the first day he leaves home. It's a story told with gentle humor and includes the wild life of the whole valley: a chipmunk nibbling on a lavender flower, an owl blinking into the night, a coyote being outsmarted by a blue heron, a band of clowning otters, a black bear tearing peach-pink salmon to shreds with his teeth. And there's a symphony given by the crickets, whose wings you see quivering, and by the frogs, each distending his ugly jowls to make a tuba.

It's an extra long show, with all the shorts as well as the long feature, and it's extra, extra good.

Theater Guild Accepting Orders For Fall Season

The Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of New York City, will begin to take orders today for six subscription plays to be presented at the Gayety Theater this season. The six plays are expected to include three of the Guild's own Broadway successes of last season: "I Know My Love" with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, the S. N. Behrman adaptation of Marcel Achards play; Shakespeare's "As You Like It" with Katharine Hepburn as Rosalind, and "Come Back, Little Sheba" by William Inge with Shirley Booth in the lead.

"The Death of a Salesman" by Arthur Miller and George Bernard Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple" starring Maurice Evans, are also to be included. The sixth play has not yet been announced.

The Washington subscription office is at the Hotel Raleigh, Room 120. It is under the supervision of Bess Davis Schreiner and will be open Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays from noon to 5 p. m. Further information is obtainable by phone at DI-2433.

Her Acting's Still Tops, However

Rainer's 'Lady From the Sea' Is All at Sea

"THE LADY FROM THE SEA" has never been considered top drawer Ibsen, but it outclasses his more highly praised "Hedda Gabler," for example, in two theatrically important ways: It has more suspense for most people, since most people have never even heard of "The Lady From the Sea," and it deals with a more exciting problem, since the lady who loves the sea also loves a sailor.

She's tied in an emotional knot because the sailor has such sex appeal for her that she cannot enjoy her husband's attentions although she hasn't seen the sailor in more than six years. Hedda's dither was over an ambition she could not fulfill, or something dull like that. Sex is not only here to stay, it is still the best subject for conversation in a talky play, assuming all else is equal and the playwright has something to say.

It's even possible that "The Lady From the Sea," which will play through Sunday at the Olney Theater, Olney, Md., and go to New York next Monday as the second in the Festival Theater's four scheduled presentations, may come into its own after 62 years. Ibsen had the instinctive feel for delusions that Freud found the word for.

Now half the theater audience knows all about people falling in love with their cereal spoons or having marriage fantasies, and may be able to comprehend the tortured Ellida better than their counterparts did in 1923 when Eleanora Duse played it, or in 1929 when Blanche Yurka played it, or in 1934 when Mary Hone gave it its last American performance. With psychoanalysis on every movie screen, the 1950 audience may have better means of appreciating the unhappy Ellida's problem.

Back to Audience

The audience may not, however, have much appreciation for Luise Rainer's interpretation. She's made Ellida a little off her noggin, and there's no need. Miss Rainer, who gives me the eerie feeling that she's playing Elizabeth Bergner playing Ellida, seems determined to "make like a seagull." When she is discussing her love for the sea and the sea creatures, she becomes glittery-eyed and all at sea in every sense. Actually, Ellida should have some semblence to the normal to make her plight seem appealing. As is, it's hard to see why either man would want this slightly hysterical woman on his hands, much less stand at 10 paces and beg her to be his.

Aside from interpretation, however, it's hard to quarrel with Miss Ranier's acting. She seems able to make her voice, her body, her eyes, do exactly as she wishes. She plays an entire scene with her back to the audience, and suffers no loss of intensity or projection when she does it.

The winner of two Academy Awards—one for "The Good Earth" and the other for "The Great Ziegfeld"—Miss Rainer has lost none of her acting cunning. It was she, by the way, who chose this play for the Festival in New York, and for that, I think she deserves credit. It's too good to stay buried in the library.

The others in the company seem perfectly aware of what they are about. Herbert Berghof, an experienced Ibsen man, is superb as Dr. Wangel, the middle-aged widower with two daughters who has married Ellida and eventually brings her out of her fantasy by offering her freedom to leave him. Offered freedom, but aware of her responsibilities for the first time, Ellida wakes up.

A balding man of no great physical beauty, Berghof competes with Jeff Morrow, a well-thatched and handsome man who plays the sailor. And yet it is an even battle, which says something for Berghof's forceful personality.

Among the younger people, Anne Jackson and Steven Hill are a joy to watch. Miss Jackson, as the half-grown daughter of Wangel and his first wife, is an out-spoken tomboy of great charm. Hill is a naive young sculptor, unaware that he is dying of a lung condition. He's an ineffectual young man who sees himself as a prospective success to whom any young lady should be glad to subjugate her own personality. Socially inept and all unconscious of it, the young sculptor is a tidy character study which Hill plays for exactly the right value. (He's due on the Capitol Theater screen today in 'Lady Without Passport."

Joan Chandler and Theodore Newton also perform very capably, but in less showy roles.

Director Sam Wanamaker has permitted his cast to play the humor in this production—the play is by no means all neurosis and frustration—brightly. And he's certainly made the most of all its drama and its melodrama, too. If he can just get Miss Rainer back on the ground, I think he'll have a play which will run past its scheduled stopping date at the Fulton in New York, since the Festival plays may be moved to another theater and run past the scheduled two weeks for as long as the audience likes.—S. Sidney Lust Chain Opens New Movie at Viers Mill

Sidney Lust's Viers Mill Theater, suburban Maryland's newest, will be opened to the public with a dedication program tonight. The new theater, which is located on Viers Mill road, between Wheaton and Rockville, Md., will open its doors at 7 p. m., and there will be one performance Thursday, starting at 8 p. m.

Judge Stedman Prescott of Rockville, will officiate at the dedication exercises, in which State and county officials and civic leaders, will participate. Music will be furnished by Leon Brusiloff's Orchestra, and there will be several stage acts.

The feature film for the evening will be "The Good Humor Man," starring Jack Carson.

The modernistic front of the theater has a marquee, on which is mounted an animated drama mask. The front doors are of solid glass, and open on a streamlined lobby. The auditorium which will seat close to 1000 persons, has been designed to afford perfect visibility from every seat in the house. The Viers Mill has been equipped with chairs which swing back to leave ample room for passing. The chairs are constructed on the scientific principle of posture control and have comfort advantages never before built into theater seats.

Free parking facilities have been provided for 500 cars.

Other motion pictures operated by Sidney Lust include the Hyattsville, Cheverly, Marlboro, Bethesda; the Milo in Rockville; Kaywood and Cameo Theatres, in Mount Rainier; the Drive-In, Beltsville; the Drive-In, Hampton, Va., and the Leader, Washington. The next addition to the Lust Theaters will be the Allen Theater, which is now being erected on New Hampshire ave. and East-West hwy.

Outlaws Kill 3

Palermo, Sicily, Aug. 2 (AP).—Three persons were killed and one wounded by outlaw gunfire in the village of Gibella last night. This was the first outbreak of such violence since police trapped and killed the outlaw king, Salvatore Giuliano, early in July.

tenors a useful boost in their lines during the Hosanna fugue. The orchestra's tone, and the work of the augmenting forces, was of first quality.

Washington Lucky

Callaway marshaled all his resources in the most musicianly way. He deserves great credit for conceiving rehearsing, and executing such a worthy tribute to the memory of a great French-American. Washington is lucky to have such musical gifts as those displayed last night.

There were times when the balance, say between the flutes and trombones, was not what Berlioz wanted. And tenors are always scarce in a large chorus.

But for appropriateness of subject, spaciousness of plan, and high level of achievement, the Requiem of Berlioz proved a powerful occasion.

The Sesquicentennial Commission may always point proudly to these unique performances. They are the stature our 150th birthday deserves.

Speeder Captured In 14-Mile Chase

Thte chase—in which nine police cars from Brentwood, Mount Rainier, Hyattsville and the District participated—began in Brentwood, Md., police said. Speeds up to 90 milese per hour were reported.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
JOHN M. REDDING
. . . nominated by Truman

John M. Redding, publicity director of the Democratic National Committee, was nominated by President Truman yesterday to a $15,000-a-year post as Assistant Postmaster General.

He was named to replace Paul Aiken, who resigned to seek the Democratic senatorial nomination in Kansas.

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said Redding also will serve as public relations adviser to Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson.

Redding, a 41-year-old former Chicago newspaperman, has been publicity director of the Democratic Committee since April 1, 1947.

Redding entered Government service with the War Assets Administration shortly after the end of World War II, in which he served as an Air Force lieutenant colonel.

He was public relations officer for Gen. Omar N. Bradley during the war and mapped the press coverage for the invasion of Europe by American forces.

He became acquainted with members of the Truman Administration during the Potsdam Conference, where he was in charge of the Berlin press camp and served as Army spokesman.

Before the war, Redding worked for the Chicago Herald Examiner and the Chicago Herald American.

Redding is married and has two children.

'50 Corporate Profits Reach Record Rate

Corporation profits are running at a record date, with the second quarter total 43 percent higher than a year ago.

This upward surge developed without the stimulus of war which did not boost prices, sales and earnings until the start of the second half of the year.

A compilation made yesterday by the Asscociated Press of the earnings of 450 corporations in all fields of business showed these totals:

1950 second quarter $1,625,040,257; 1949 second quarter, $1,132,763,017; increase: 43 per cent.

1950 first half $2,865,306,259; 1949 first half $2,319,616,453; increase: 24 percent.

The percentage of gain over a year ago reflects the quickie recession during the first half of 1949 which, of course, makes today's earnings look even bigger by comparison.

But the absolute dollar totals during the second quarter this year are running at an annual rate that would top any other full year.

ATF REPORT: ATF, Inc., told its earnings story to its employes today in beverage coasters. The company sent each worker a carton style annual report in operations and earnings. Inclosed was a set of eight coasters imprinted in two colors. On one side was a pie-chart breakdown of the company's income dollar. On the other side was a list of ATF's five subsidiaries.

NEW DISTRIBUTOR: Washington Wholesale Grocery Co. has been appointed exclusive distributor for Birdseye frozen food products in the Washington area. C. H. Titus, district manager of the Birdseye-Snider Division of General Foods Corp., announced the appointment yesterday. Louis Fishman, secretary-treasurer of the Washington firm, will direct the distribution of the Birdseye goods from the Terminal Refrigerating & Warehousing Corp. plant.

ODD LOTS: Electric power production last week hit another new high record at 6,190,098,000 kilowatt hours, the Edison Electric Institute reports . . . The wholesale food price index of Dun & Bradstreet advanced 3 cents this week to $6.53, the highest since September 28, 1948 when it was $6.70 . . . The Louisville & Nashville Railroad has purchased 41 new diesel-electric locomotives . . . Gulf Oil Corp. has awarded a contract for the construction of a catalytic cracking unit at Port Arthur, Tex., to the M. W. Kellogg Co.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: W. H. Winans has been elected vice president in charge of industrial relations of Union Carbide & Carbon Corp. . . . Mrs. Martha S. Sellers has been named assistant to Charles D. Frazer, executive vice president of the National Air Council . . . J. P. Reinhold has been appointed public relations assistant to the president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway.

REALTY BONDS OFF: The Amott-Baker realty bond price average recorded a decline of 0.6 percent in real estate bond prices during July. This was the second successive month in which real estate bond prices went down. Previously, the market had risen continuously through 11 consecutive months. The average price of the 40 issues comprising the index stood at $800. per $1000 bond on July 31, as compared with $805 on June 30.

Carpet Offers Withdrawn

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—James D. Wise, president of Bigelow Sanford Carpet Co. said today an unprecedented flow of carpet orders has caused the company to temporarily withdraw from sale all merchandise not currently in stock.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 2 (AP).—A moderate run of buying orders had more influence than normal on the Board of Trade today—all cereals ended with fair-sized gains.

The market's main feature was a lack of selling pressure. Thus, even though the buying power was not great, it caused a steady advance throughout the session. Only two or three contracts dipped below the previous close at any time during the day.

Rush Holt Wins GOP Primary In W. Virginia

Charlestown, W. Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—Rush D. Holt, Democratic "boy Senator" turned Republican, gained an impressive primary election victory yesterday in his bid to return to Congress as a Representative from West Virginia's Third District.

Returns from 397 of the District's 505 precincts gave Holt 12,318 votes to 4145 for Rufus C. Hurt, his closest opponent. Two others were completely outdistanced.

In the general election, Holt will meet Rep. Cleveland M. Bailey, who easily received the Democratic renomination.

Holt was elected to the U. S. Senate in 1934 but had to wait seven months until he was old enough to be seated. He became outspokenly anti-New Deal and was defeated in later campaigns for Governor and Senator.

Now 45, he has spent much of the intervening time in the State Legislature.

The Holt comeback was the only spark in an otherwise tame primary, resulting in light balloting. Candidates were nominated to five other congressional seats—all held by Democrats—as well as three Statewide offices, the Legislature and some county offices. No U. S. Senate seat was at stake.

Representative Robert L. Ramsay of the First District kept a safe margin over J. Patrick Beacom, a former State Senator. The other Congressmen were renominated without opposition. They are Harley O. Staggers, Second; M. G. Burnside, Fourth; John M. Kee, Fifth, and E. H. Hedrick, Sixth.

Darby, Carlson Team Scores in Kansas

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 2 (AP).—A coalition of the Senator Harry Darby and Gov. Frank Carlson forces gained a stronger grip on the Republican Party in Kansas today as voters drew up a general election ballot that also heralds new leadership for the State's downtrodden Democrats.

Darby, who threw the Kansas delegation behind Thomas E. Dewey for the Presidential nomination in 1948, won another State party control fight with Alf M. Landon, 1936 GOP Presidential nominee, in yesterday's primary.

The Kansas junior Senator, serving on a Carlson appointment, backed former Attorney General Edward F. Arn in a smashing victory over a Landon-backed country editor-rancher, Willard Mayberry, for the governorship nomination.

Mayberry, Landon's former secretary, trailed Arn by upward of 40,000 votes in virtually complete returns.

Carlson, who served six terms in Congress before retiring in 1946 to run for Governor, won the nomination for Darby's Senatorial seat by brushing aside the challenge of Harry W. Colmery, Topeka attorney and former National Commander of the American Legion.

But it was the underdog Democrats who provided the surprise in the balloting. They nominated Paul Aiken for the Senate.

A former Assistant Postmaster General, Aiken had the White House's tacit support in his Senatorial contest with Carl V. Rice, National Committeeman.

Returns from 2657 precincts gave Aiken 52,728 and Rice 39,633.

ELECTRICAL ARM—The new arm announced by the IBM company is shown with the top forearm cover removed to reveal a light, compact, self-contained unit. All operating equipment except the batteries and control lines are in the shell

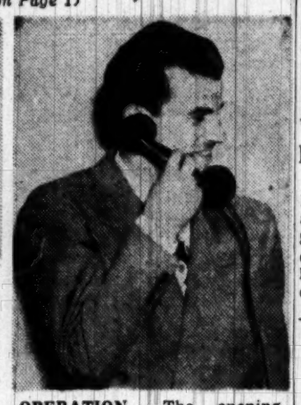
CONTROL—Arm motions are selected by pressures on a pair of small pneumatic bladders under the amputee's big and little toes. The bladders are molded in a thin, plastic insole connected to the arm by flat rubber tubing



OPERATION — The opening and closing of the hand is voluntary and under control of the amputee. He can obtain a grasp delicate enough to handle an egg or strong enough to hold a phone

Akron, Ohio, Aug. 2 (AP).—General Tire & Rubber Co. today increased the price of passenger car and farm tractor tires by 5 percent and truck tires by 7½ percent.

Md. Progressives Defy Wallace

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—Maryland's Progressive Party has broken with Henry A. Wallace over the subject of the Korean crisis.

The party decided to indorse a resolution contending continuation of fighting in Korea "is not in the interests of world peace" and calling for settlement by a United Nations that recognizes Communist China.

Wallace, 1948 presidential candidate of the party, on the other hand, stated recently:

"I hold no brief for the past actions of either the United States or Russia, but when my country is at war, and the United Nations sanctions that war, I am on the side of my country and the United Nations."

Bandits Lose $100,000

Timmins, Ont., Aug. 2 (AP).—Two hooded bandits were forced to abandon three gold bricks worth $100,000 and their getaway car today when it burst in flames. They had stolen the gold from the office of the Coniaurum Mines Ltd.

Seagoing Bond ($100) Beached

Most of this story has been floating around for about a month now, but it has a nice ending.

It began at dusk on July 4, on the sands just below Rehoboth Beach, Del., when William B. Callan, 38, of Fairfax, Va., knocked off his surf fishing, left his gear, and went after some food.

When he returned after dark, his tackle box was missing. In it was his wallet with $30 and a $100 war bond. Callan, an analyst in the Agriculture Department's Production and Marketing Administration, figured someone had walked off with it.

Last Sunday, Aviation Chief Machinist's Mate Rebo Pope, 31, attached to the Anacostia Naval Air Station, was doing some surf fishing just below Rehoboth Beach.

He saw a wave wash in a tin tackle box about 50 yards away. Someone in his party rushed over to grab the box before another wave could take it back out.

Sunday night, Callan got a call from Pope. "Did you lose something?" the sailor asked.

On Monday, Callan, who never suspected the tide as the tackle-box thief, visited the Pope home at 1916 21st pl. se.

Everything in the box, he found, was pretty much waterlogged, but the $30 was still very much expendable. Callan left a third of it with Mrs. Pope.

Raids in St. Marys Net 24; 2 From D. C.

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 2 (Spl.). Two Washington men were among the 24 persons arrested today when more than 20 State policemen staged simultaneous gambling raids in three St. Mary's County towns.

The D. C. men taken into custody were Benjamin and William Sacks, of 718 Rittenhouse st. nw. State police said the pair was charged with gaming at a theater building in Hollywood. Both posted bonds for a preliminary hearing before a Leonardtown magistrate on Monday.

Taking part was State's Attorney John H. P. Briscoe, whose office had been laying the groundwork for the raids for six months.

The raiders were led by Capt. George E. Davidson of State police headquarters in Pikesville.

Arrests were made in establishments in Lexington Park, Hollywood, Mechanicsville.

He said two "numbers" headquarters were raided and "boxes full of lottery slips" were seized.

The captain said undercover operatives had visited gambling casinos and obtained information that led to the arrests of five persons. He said roulette, dice, blackjack and other gambling games were played in the casinos—one at Great Mills and another at Lexington Park.

Davidson said the casinos themselves were not visited by the raiding parties.

Two bookmaking establishments were also raided. Det. Sergt. M. E. Jackson said he took telephoned bets at one of them for two hours this afternoon.

Separate raiding parties were led by State Police Capts. John H. Dowd and W. H. Weber.

Among those arrested, Sergt. Jackson said, were Al Fisher, charged with owning and operating a bookmaking establishment at The Horseroom, Lexington Park, and Walter Norris, charged with mai ining a building for the operation of a numbers lottery

Judge Bids Telegraph Co. Open Books

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 2 (U.P.).—Western Union Telegraph Co. was ordered today to open its books to investigators studying its dealings with two East St. Louis, Ill., betting commissioners.

Circuit Judge James R. Breakey, jr., also denied Western Union's motion to dismiss gambling conspiracy charges and extended a temporary order prohibiting transmitting of money orders to the bookies.

Prosecutor Douglas K. Reading, who field the civil conspiracy charges, said he would ask the company to furnish all books, records and memoranda referring to transmission of money orders for betting.

Final wording of Breakey's order will be determined at a conference Monday with Reading and company attorneys.

Sheriff, 2 Constables Suspended in Florida

Tallahassee, Fla., Aug. 2 (AP).—Gov. Fuller Warren suspended Okaloosa County Sheriff H. Isle Enzor and two constables today as the campaign against gambling in Florida quickened.

He prepared to hear charges Thursday that Sheriff P. A. Mero of Seminole County has neglected to enforce the gambling laws.

At Miami, the State Racing Commission called a public hearing for August 14 as part of its investigation of the ownership of Florida horse and dog tracks.

The suspension orders against Sheriff Enzor and Constables Fox M. Wilson and O. L. Bengtson came a few hours after the Tampa Tribune reported gambling houses at Fort Walton still were operating.

Warren said they had neglected to enforce the gambling laws in line with his July 7 order putting them on 60-day probation after a hearing on charges against them.

The Governor's summons for Sheriff Mero to come up Thursday for a hearing also followed a Tribune report that gambling was permitted in Seminole County.

Suspension of the three Okaloosa officers followed by 10 days Warren's ouster of Sheriff Clark of Broward County on the basis of his admission to the United States Senate Kefauver committee that he was a partner in a firm that engaged in polita and slot machine operations.

Grand Jury Called To Probe Death Of Md. Trooper

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 2 (AP).—Judge Joseph D. Mish today called the Washington County grand jury into special session for next Monday to consider the killing of State Trooper Lauren M. Ridge.

The 29-year-old trooper was shot to death July 14 while trying to disarm a former circus performer who had fired at a car occupied by two tax assessors.

Steve Oris, 61, who was shot four times by other officers, is charged with the murder. He is in fair condition at the Washington County Hospital.

JUDGE ALEXANDER HOLTZOFF.

Suspect Held In Rape of Girl 14 Months Ago

District and Alexandria police teamed up here yesterday to capture a 38-year-old rape suspect sought by Alexandria police for more than a year.

Inspector Russell A. Hawes, Alexandria detective chief, identified him as Virgil Shipes, a former Alexandria cemetery employe, who now lives at 1315 Meridian pl. nw. Hawes said Shipes was charged with raping a 13-year-old Alexandria girl in May, 1949. Since then the girl has had a child.

Detectives closed in on Shipes yesterday afternoon in the Park rd. branch of Riggs National Bank, 14th st. and Park rd. nw. They had followed a "known friend" of the suspect in the belief he would lead them to their quarry. Shipes, who did not resist arrest, waived extradition and returned voluntarily to Alexandria with Detective Robert Jones.

The detective chief identified Shipes as a friend of the girl's family.

Shipes apparently left Alexandria before the child's condition was discovered by her mother, Hawes said.

Shipes was being questioned by Alexandria detectives last night. Held without bond, he is scheduled to face a preliminary hearing in Alexandria Police Court today at 10 a. m.

Court of Appeals Throws Out Lewis and Billeci Convictions reasonable doubt, the appeals court added.

4. In giving the jury the so-called Horning charge, which included the sentence "In a criminal case the court cannot peremptorily instruct the jury to find the defendant guilty. If the law permitted it, I would do so in this case."

That charge, approved by the Supreme Court, was given in a case where there was no dispute about the facts, the court said.

"In the case at bar, although no evidence was presented by the defense, there was vigorous disagreement as to the facts strenuously pressed by cross-examination and argument," the court ruled.

The jury deliberated 35½ hours and was recalled six times before reaching the guilty verdict.

Attilio Acalotti, the self-styled "Mayor of Thomas Circle," was convicted with Lewis and Billeci, who are free on bond. Last week from jail Arcolotti withdrew his appeal to become eligible for parole and as a result he still stands convicted.

The Court of Appeals upheld Judge Holtzoff on all defense objections except those dealing with his instructions to the jury.

The court ruled that the search warrant was validly for what the Government described as the syndicate's headquarters at 4310 46th st., Bladensburg, Md.

The Court of Appeals did not rule on the defense claim that a mistrial should have been declared on January 26, when it was revealed that efforts had been made to tamper with the jury. Two men have been indicted and charged with that tampering.

The Court of Appeals devoted more than a page of its opinion to a discussion of defense objections to the intonations and gestures of Judge Holtzoff during his instructions to the jury.

The defense claimed to the Appeals Court that Judge Holtzoff "frequently leaned toward the jury, gestured in an emphatic manner with his hand and raised his voice when he was reciting those principles which tended to produce a verdict of guilty, but that when he told the jurors they could return a verdict of not guilty his remarks were barely audible."

The court pointed out that the description of Judge Holtzoff's intonations and gestures made by the defense in objection during the trial "falls far short" of the description given by defense counsel in its appeal brief.

The Court of Appeals opinion closed with a two-page discussion of "the rule governing a Federal trial judge in commenting upon evidence." Judge Holtzoff was not named, but the Court of Appeals said that "several features of the present record require us" to restate the rule.

"A Federal trial judge in a criminal case is not an inert figure," the opinion said. "He is not a mere moderator . . . he may guide and assist the jury in its consideration of the evidence.

"But there is a constitutional line across which he cannot go . . . His guilt or innocence must be decided by 12 laymen and not by the one judge.

"It is a serious thing for an appellate court to reverse convictions in criminal cases. But the controlling importance is that the law be followed. The rules of law applicable to the function of the judge in a criminal trial by a jury are well settled. No matter what the impulse may be to transgress or evade them under provocative circumstances, they must be observed.

"This is basic, without exception, and compulsory," the opinion concluded.

telephones in his Capitol office had been tapped within the past year. Neely would not identify the Senator by name.

Reports that the prominent Senator was Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas were discounted by the Illinois Senator last night.

"I don't think Senator Neely had me in mind," Lucas said. About six weeks ago, Lucas said, he thought someone might be tapping his office telephone. A check by telephone men working at the Capitol indicated there was no tap going, he added.

"The District Committee is not investigating wiretapping because Lucas said his phone was tapped," the majority leader emphasized.

Brewster Favors Probe

Brewster greeted the District Committee action, blessed by the Senate Democratic leadership, as a "most excellent idea."

The inquiry, he said, would "dispose of the rumors by getting the facts."

"I neither authorized, directed nor heard of any wire-tapping in the Hughes investigation," he declared.

Brewster gave this accounting of his contact with Lieutenant Shimon:

During the Hughes inquiry Brewster said he noticed somebody was shadowing him. He told a fellow Senator about it, and the latter reported the incident "to somebody." Then a Lieutenant Shimon came to his office and said he wanted to check the telephones. The policeman brought Brewster a rogue's gallery photo of the man who was supposed to be following the Senator. The Senator said his "shadow" had a criminal record and was from New York. Brewster said he still could identify him.

Later Shimon reported back to Brewster that the man would no longer be trailing him. "I think those were the only two occasions I have seen the policeman," Brewster told reporters.

Cites Possibilities

The Senator said he was delighted that the wire-tap investigation will go outside the Police Department. "It (the inquiry) undoubtedly will have some interesting possibilities," he commented.

Senator Williams (R., Del.), just before the District Committee approved the investigation, told his colleagues he had "heard rumors" recently that different downtown departments use recording machines on telephones which do not give the usual clicking wire-tap sounds.

He said he did not believe this practice was within the District law and urged that the investigation cover such complaint.

Neely and others assured Williams the language of the resolution was sufficiently broad to encompass the Senator's proposal.

The committee-approved resolution in full: "That the chairman appoint a subcommittee to investigate wire-tapping of telephones and other means of communication in the District of Columbia by members of the police force and others, and to report to the committee thereon; and that such subcommittee be authorized to swear witnesses, to issue subpenas and other compulsory process and to exercise all other powers which the committee itself may exercise."

Wiretap Probe Jury Hears Shimon Friend

The District grand jury continued its investigation yesterday of wiretapping here, with William J. Nolan, a money lender, an old friend of Police Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon as the principal witness.

Lieut. Shimon was reportedly the subject of a secret report made by police into wiretapping. According to informed sources, one of Shimon's aides may have helped tap telephone lines during the 1947 Senate committee investigation of millionaire industrialist Howard Hughes.

Nolan, who has offices at 1102 New York ave. nw., had hid his identity the day before when he appeared in court to confer with the Government porsecutor. He admitted it, however, to reporters yesterday.

He would not comment on his testimony, but said that Shimon had been a business associate several years ago in an automobile firm.

Nolan said he knew nothing about wiretapping, and although he did not mention Shimon in this connection, he did say:

"I hate to see anyone beaten when he is down. The man in this case is down."

Shimon was transferred from the United States Attorney's office squad after the investigation by police began. He is presently stationed at the Second Precinct station.

After 13 Hours

First Spot Best Spot, Angler Smith Learns

By Red Smith

STURGEON BAY, WIS., AUG. 3 (NYHT).—As reported yesterday, an afternoon of fishing on the lake on Chambers Island, which is a bosky sandbar in Green Bay, produced two dispirited largemouth bass, one bluegill and several northern pike which were released disdainfully by Duncan Thorpe, of the Door County Chamber of Commerce.

The bass were invited to dinner but after Mr. Thorpe had got a fire prepared for them they couldn't be found. They'd been left on a stringer tied to the boat, and now they were gone. Three small Sea Scouts from Menominee, Mich., had a tent nearby but suspicious sniffs in that area could detect no bouquet of frying fish.

Red Smith

Bacon and eggs provided enough energy for night fishing on the lake, and a big yellow moon furnished light for the purpose. The evening was warm and beautiful and so quiet in the lee of one of the lake's small islands that the splashing of feeding fish seemed monstrously noisy.

Whatever the fish were feeding on, it wasn't artificial flies or bugs or poppers or plugs or spinners. In almost four hours, just one bass rose for a fly, missed it, and went away to brood. There was no choice save unconditional surrender.

Duffie stashed on shore had included a jug of old something or other, an ancient Indian remedy for infection caused by the teeth of angry pike. Now as midnight approached and fatigue arrived, medication seemed indicated. But the jug was missing. In their tent the Sea Scouts slept deeply, pure of heart and, perhaps, of breath.

PERMISSION HAD been received to sleep in one of the island's three unoccupied cottages. By the light of candles, it was discovered that the cottage had not been entirely unoccupied.

Shirley Povich On Vacation

Shirley Povich, The Washington Post's sports columnist, is on vacation. His column will be resumed upon his return.

Some zillions of bats had been using it for purposes of their own. However, eiderdown sleeping bags were spread on beds and employed effectively until 4 a. m., when Mr. Thorpe made like an alarm clock.

In the brightening dawn, a big buck deer was browsing. He paid no attention to humans emerging from the house, and when Mr. Thorpe said "whoosh" loudly, the deer merely lifted his horny hatrack and stared. "Whoosh" Mr. Thorpe said again, and the buck loped into the woods, breezing.

The lake was flat as a fried egg. In shallow water on the beach, where it had blown ashore during the night after working free from the boat, lay a stringer holding two bass and one bluegill. On one count, anyhow, the Sea Scouts were acquitted.

SIX HOURS of relentless fishing ensued. The world holds no deeper peace than that which lay on Chambers Island that morning. The three bass and several northern pike which were caught were about as truculent as Whistler's Mother. Once a big northern surfaced near the boat, thrust his ugly undershot face out of the water, looked around sleepily and submerged. A pair of loons flew overhead, taking their time. The only contentious note was struck by two kingbirds quarreling with some enemy on one of the islands.

The sun got high and hot. For the bass and pike it was siesta time but bluegills were busy all along the shore. They developed a deep and lasting affection for a tiny yellow popper, swatting at it again and again with a small kissing sound. It would have been possible to land almost any number of bluegills, but the whole purpose of the two-day visit to Chambers was to wrench heavy largemouth out of the island's lake.

By 10 o'clock, every yard of the lake's surface had been lashed with flies and plugs. There were, at least, enough bass for breakfast and obviously there would be no more. Back in the cove on the bay shore, where the outboard had been left after the trip from the mainland, Mr. Thorpe built a fire and started coffee. His companion carried the fish down to the water to clean them.

There was a splash just off shore. Then another and another. The joint was loaded with smallmouth bass feeding on minnows. A fly dropped among them took two legal bass inside a minute before the flurry ceased.

AFTER BREAKFAST, some hours were devoted to mechanical pursuits involving the outboard. Fouled sparkplugs were removed, cleaned, restored, removed again, recleaned and finally replaced. Once the motor started perkily but the boat didn't move.

Every now and then the motor started, the boat made brief trial runs, and the motor sputtered out. On each such occasion, a trolling lure was tossed over the stern. And on every little run there was at least one strike.

How typical can a fishing story get? You wrestle a motor across nine miles of water. Moor your boat in an island cove and go ashore to fish an inland lake all afternoon, all evening and all morning. You flog that lake for something like 13 hours, laboring vastly, and you get a practically irreducible minimum of spiritless fish.

You return at last to the place you had abandoned in the first place. And the water is practically solid with bass trying to jump into the boat. You give up.

Phils Whip Cincy, 2-0, on Three-Hitter By Church

Philadelphia, Aug. 1 (AP).—Emory (Bubba) Church hurled three-hit ball and joined with Del Ennis in driving in the Philadelphia Phillies two runs as the National League leaders defeated the Cincinnati Reds 2-0 tonight.

Church, winning his fifth game against one defeat, singled a run home in the fourth and Ennis hit his 24th homer in the eighth.

The victory, the Phils 14th in 17 games against the Reds this year, stretched the Whiz Kids' lead to three and one-half games.

The Reds looked as if they were going to break through Church at almost any time but the rookie held them at bay as Richie Ashburn caught seven flies in center field and Dick Sisler three more in left.

Church was in real trouble only once. That was in the eighth when Dixie Howell doubled and went to third on an infield out. The Reds tried to squeeze a run home but Howell was trapped and tagged out by Church.

Hits by Gran Hamner and Andy Seminick set the stage for Church's run-producing single in the fourth.

Russell Bats Dodgers To 5-4 Triumph

Brooklyn, Aug. 3 (AP).—Switch-hitting Jimmy Russell was the whole show today as the Brooklyn Dodgers nipped the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5-4, in 10 innings.

The former Pittsburgh outfielder batted in the last three Brooklyn runs with a home run and single. The single came in the tenth inning with two out and the bases loaded.

Russell's homer, with one on in the last of the ninth, retired the score at 4-4 after Ralph Kiner had put the Pirates in the lead with a two-run homer in the top of the inning It was Kiner's twenty-ninth of the season.

Russell's homer was hit right-handed against Southpaw Bill Werle. He hit the single batting lefthanded against Righthander Murray Dickson. The latter was charged with his twelfth loss.

It was the second time in a week that Russell won a game with hits from each side of the plate. He slammed two home runs, one left and the other righthanded in Brooklyn's 7-5 victory over St. Louis July 26.

The Dodgers got only three hits off Werle in the first eight innings but one was Jackie Robinson's eleventh home run following a walk to Pee Wee Reese.

Braves Oust Cards from 3d; No. 15 for Sain

Boston, Aug. 2 (AP).—Johnny Sain clicked off his fifteenth win of the season by hurling the Boston Braves to a 4-3 decision over the St. Louis Cardinals tonight before a 21,365 crowd. The triumph moved the Tribesmen up a notch into third place and dropped the Cards from second to fourth in the National League standing.

In gaining his first win over the Redbirds since June 25, 1949, Sain limited them to seven hits and did not issue a base on balls while facing 32 batters.

Pinch-hitter Walker Cooper singled in Sid Gordon to break a 3-3 tie with one out in the eighth inning. Earl Torgeson provided the first two Boston runs by bashing his 17th homer after Sam Jethroe singled in the first inning.

The Braves made eight hits against lefty Harry Brecheen, who gave up a third run in the third inning on two bases on balls and a single by Gordon, who had a perfect night at the plate with three hits and a base on balls.

Sain set down the first 10 St. Louis batters in order and then was clubbed for three consecutive hits. With one down in the fourth frame, Red Schoendienst singled to right field, Stan Musial doubled him over the plate and then scored on Enos Slaughter's one-base drive.

4-0 Win Boosts Tigers Lead To 2 Games

Detroit, Aug. 2 (AP).—Little Hal White gave the Detroit Tigers' pennant hopes a big boost today as he blanked the New York Yankees, 4-0, on a two-hitter to increase Detroit's American League lead to two full games.

White, who wasn't even supposed to pitch in the Yankee series until Tiger Righthander Art Houtteman came up with a side injury last night, faced only 31 men as he became the first righthander to shut out th New Yorkers this year.

Only singles by Gene Woodling in the third and Johnny Mize in the fourth marred White's day as he outpitched the veteran Allie Reynolds to get credit for his third win of the year as against four losses.

It was White's fourth starting assignment of the season as he had been switched from a relief pitcher to starting assignments when injuries cropped up in the Tiger mound staff.

He drove in what proved to be the winning run with a second-inning single that sent Detroit's first run across the plate.

White then protected his 1-0 lead in a pitching duel with Reynolds which was broken up in the seventh as Detroit banged three runs across to get its second straight victory in the important series.

Washington Gives $10,000, Coombs For '48 Tribe Ace

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Pitcher Gene Bearden, hero of Cleveland's 1948 world's championship team, was purchased from the Indians yesterday by the Nats for the $10,000 waiver price, President Clark Griffith announced.

The handsome lefthander changed uniforms last night in Cleveland where the Nats concluded a two-game series with the Indians.

In addition to the cash, the Nats gave Cleveland Infielder Merrill Combs and the Indians promptly dispatches him to their San Diego Pacific Coast League farm.

Beardon, a left-handed knuckleballer, beat the Boston Red Sox as a rookie in the famous playoff game for the 1948 American League pennant. A day before he had pitched the Indians into a tie for the pennant.

He's 29 years old, and carries 200 pounds on a six foot three inch frame.

A 20-game winner in 1948, Bearden couldn't curb his wildness last year and won eight while losing the same number. Relegated to relief roles by manager Lou Boudreau, he has remained in that capacity this year also, appearing in only 14 games, winning one and losing three.

During Cleveland's spring training at Tucson, Ariz., this year, Bearden's name was linked with Shelley Winters, curvaceous blonde movie star, but the "romance" turned out to be nothing but a movie publicity man's gag. Miss Winters was "on location"

Nats to Charge Double Admissions

Double admissions for day and night double-headers, a brain child of Brooklyn's Branch Rickey, will be tried at Griffith Stadium soon.

President Clark Griffith yesterday announced the Nats would play a day and night game with the New York Yankees August 15 with separate admissions. The same situation will prevail August 29 with the Detroit Tigers as the opposition.

Other major league teams charging separate admissions for day and night doubleheaders are the St. Louis Cardinals and Boston Red Sox.

Larry Smacks 3 In a Row, Then Walks and Fans

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Cleveland, Aug. 2.—Larry Doby, Cleveland's slugging centerfielder, clouted three home runs tonight and helped Bob Lemon to a 11-0 victory over the Nats here tonight before 20,224 fans.

Lemon did a little helping of his own. He gave up only three hits, two of them infield "bleeders," and hit a three-run homer in winning his ninth in a row and seventeenth of the year.

Joe Gordon rounded out Cleveland's five-run homer attack, his coming with none on. Doby's three blows, all of Washington starter Chico Marrero, accounted for five runs.

Marrero, target for 13 Indian homers in five games this season, yielded the Doby homers in the first, third and fifth innings.

Shooting for his fourth homer, Doby walked off the Nats' second hurler Jim Pearce in the seventh, and went down swinging against Elmer Singleton in the eighth.

Gordon's homer was his thirteenth, Lemon's was his fifth, and Doby's were his twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth of the campaign.

The Nats had their only chance in the first inning before Doby swatted his first homer. Eddie Yost walked, Gil Coan singled to right for the only clean Washington hit, and with one out, Mickey Vernon walked to fill the bases.

But Sam Mele, the Nats' leading run producer, ended the threat by bouncing back to Lemon who started a double play with a throw to Jim Hegan at the plate, Hegan whipping Mele out at first.

With two out in the first, Doby started his fence clearing with a liner over the centerfield fence 410 feet away. Gordon made it 2-0 in the second with his homer into the leftfield stands.

The Tribe kept up their homer-an-inning pace in the third as Doby followed Lou Boudreau's single with his baby homer of the evening, a shot into the lower rightfield stands, about 350 feet distant.

The Indians skipped the fourth inning, but it was Doby's turn to bat in the fifth again. With one out and Dale Mitchell on third with a double, Doby worked the underslung Cuban to 3-2, and then blasted his longest homer, a liner which landed in the centerfield bullpen and hit the bleacher wall, 463 feet away, on one hop.

Marrero, clipped for eight hits in five innings, left a 6-0 deficit to Pearce. In the seventh, the

A two-run double by Vern Stephens, followed by Walt Dropo's single scoring Stephens gave the Sox the victory.

War Is Hell Dep't:

Steber, Expecting Call From Navy Soon, Quits Coaching Job to Rejoin Redskins

Special to The Washington Post

MOBILE, ALA., Aug. 2.—In the first reverse play of the rapidly approaching football season, the Washington Redskins today got a player from the armed services.

Guard John Steber, who expects to be recalled to active duty soon, resigned as football coach at Murphy High School here to rejoin the pros.

"I expect to be called to duty before the season is over," Steber explained, "and didn't want to leave my high school team in mid-season."

Steber, an All-America at Georgia Tech, was an engineering officer aboard a cruiser in World War II. He will leave for the Redskins' camp at Los Angeles tomorrow. This will be his fifth season in pro football.

Steber was named coach of Murphy High School here last winter.

Steber's decision makes the score between the Redskins and the armed service tied at one apiece temporarily. The Marines put a halt to Quarterback Eddie LeBaron's hopes of playing pro ball last week when they federalized his reserve unit.

Saratoga Has $962 Double, Tops For '50 in N. Y.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 2 (AP).—The largest daily double of the New York season materialized today when Belair Stud's Grey Arrow, $20,20, and Mrs. Louis Lazare's Pay Window, $27,20, combined for a payoff of $962.00. It topped the previous high of $711.80 established by Moresun and Tops All at Jamaica.

Grey Arrow, ridden by Bobby Bernhardt, had scant trouble taking the opener, and by a freak of the mutuels paid more to place than straight. He was $35.90 for place and $19 for show, almost as much as his win price.

Citation Not Lame

Chicago, Aug. 2 (AP).—Citation, sidelined for several weeks with an ankle injury, is back in training at Washington Park and will race again his trainer said today.

Purcellville Show 1st of 3

By Harry DeMawby, jr.

The Purcellville pony show Saturday will lead off the weekend schedule for horse and pony activities. The Bull Run Hunt Club's annual horse show at Manassas, Va., and the St. Marys Horse and Pony Show at the Lanham Speedway, Lanham, Md., are scheduled Sunday.

Purcellville's show will start its 25-class program at 9 a. m. (EST).

A full line of breeding, hunter and jumper classes have been planned for the pony division with entries divided into the 13.0 hand and under and over 13.0 to 14.2 hand size groups. Three junior classes for horses or ponies and the Virginia Horse Show Association Equitation Class, the day's feature, have also been listed.

The annual show of the Bull Run Hunt Club and the Prince William Post No. 158 and Auxiliary of the American Legion will again be held on the historic Portner Estate with the first call scheduled for 12 noon (EST).

Sixteen classes are carded for the afternoon show in hunter, jumper and pony divisions with championship awards being made in the hunter and jumper categories.

The St. Marys horse and pony Show is scheduled for a 10 a. m. start at the Lanham Speedway and unfolds a long day with 24 classes.

Pony divisions are divided into the three size groups with an equal amount of classes in each and junior, hunter and jumper divisions are offered with championships awarded in each.

Ted Rogers Wins, Coss Loser in Tennis Nationals

To See Champ

Menendez Inaugurates Price Control

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez of Turner's Arena, became a red hot candidate for the OPA's man-of-the-year award yesterday.

He reduced — repeat — reduced, prices for his Lightweight Champion Ike Williams-Charlie Salas non-title fight at griffith Stadium next Monday night.

Ringside seats peddle for $3.90, reserved seats $2.60 and general admission $1.00.

"It's the cheapest price ever charged to see a world's champion fight in Washington," Menendez boasted. "The way I see it, everything is going up, but people just don't have the money.

"By dropping the prices from $5 to $3 plus tax, a man can now bring his wife, or friend, see a world champion fight and still have change left from a ten dollar bill."

Only two years ago ringside prices for most fights at Griffith Stadium were $10.

Salas, Mexican-Italian scrapper, arrives in Washington this morning and will work out at Turner's Arena at 2 p. m.

Williams, Costner Signed for Sept. 15

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—The International Boxing Club today signed lightweight Champion Ike Williams and Welterweight George (Sugar) Costner of Camden, N. J., for a 10-round non-title bout at Madison Square Garden, Sept. 1. Costner recently won a unanimous decision over Williams.

Mal Leith Advances in Boys' Class

Special Dispatch to The Post

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 2—Ted Rogers, and Tim Coss, representing the Nation's capital, won and lost in the third round of the National junior and boys' tennis championships.

Rogers, from Chevy Chase, seeded tenth among the juniors, defeated Dick Holroyd, of Miami, Fla., 6—2, 6—2, and advanced to the fourth bracket. Coss, the Washington prep champion, lost to Whitney Reed, of Alameda, Calif., 6—3, 6—4.

In the boys' division, Malcolm Leith, also from Chevy Chase, remained in the competition by defeating Jerry Budzelek, of Gary, Ind., 6 4, 6—0, in the third round.

The top-seeded junior favorites, including the tournament choice, Hamilton Richardson, of Baton Rouge, La., advanced through the third round without incident. Richardson won about as he pleased from Leslie Pollack, of Woodmore, N. Y., 6—0, 6—3, and Jacque Grigry, of Alhambra, Cal., seeded third, easily put out Keen Angyal, of Hamtramack, Mich., 6—2, 6—4.

Rogers, the Eastern interscholastic camp, did not get a serious challenge in his match with Holroyd, but tomorrow he faces Bob Perry, of Los Angeles, the former National boys king who is seeded fifth among the juniors.

The best tennis of the morning round was played in the Coss-Reed battle. It revealed contrasting styles with Reed smashing and slugging the ball in his efforts to reach the net position, and Coss, the steady, accurate baseline player, shooting for the sidelines and trying to pin his opponent deep in the court. Coss' soft serve, coupled with a weaker volley game, gave Reed the edge he required to win the vital points.

Rain halted doubles play in the afternoon.

Pafko Slams 3 Homers but Giants Win 2

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—Andy Pafko hammered three home runs as the New York Giants whipped the Cubs, 8-6, in the second game for Chicago but it was not enough of today's doubleheader. The Giants also won the opener, 11-1, to sweep the two games.

Larsen Ousted; Bogley Victor

South Orange, N. J., Aug. 2 (AP). Two seeded players, one American and one foreign, took the count in the men's singles today as the Eastern Grass Court Tennis Championships moved into the quarter-finals round.

The American casualty was Art Larsen of San Leandro, Calif., this country's sixth-ranking star. He was brushed into the discard by big Jim Brink of Seattle, 8—6, 11—9.

The foreign victim was Felicisimo Ampon, midget Filipino. He bowed to Earl Cochell of San Francisco, No. 7 in the U. S. ranking, 5—7, 6—2, 6—2.

Joining Cochell in the round of eight were eighth-seeded Vic Seixas of Philadelphia, and Tony Trabert of Cincinnati. Seixas defeated a visiting Australian, Mervyn Rose, 6—3, 6—2, while Trabert put the skids under Harold Burrows of Charlottesville, Va., 11—9, 6—2.

In the first round of men's doubles, Gill Bogley of Chevy Chase, Md., and Charles DeVoe, Indianapolis, defeated J. Gilbert Hall and Charles Hunt, New York, 6—2, 1—6, 6—3.

In the women's seingles, Ann Gray of Washington, D. C., was eliminated by Doris Hart of Jacksonville, Fla., 6—0, 6—1.

Although Cleveland officials preferred not to comment on the matter, it is believed Bearden and Manager Boudreau were not on the best of terms.

"I won't say anything about that," an Indians executive said yesterday, "but he's received more opportunities this year than his record justifies."

Harris Promises Plenty of Work

Manager Bucky Harris welcomed Bearden to his team and promised him plenty of work.

Bearden, who owns a 6-1 lifetime record against the league-leading Detroit Tigers, will make his first start for the Nats Sunday against the Tigers, Harris said.

"Cleveland people told me he arm was o.k., but that he was wild," Griffith said. "Anybody would be wild pitching as infrequently as that. He'll get plenty of work from Bucky."

Two other teams, the league-leading Detroit Tigers and the second-place New York Yankees put in a claim for Bearden, but the Nats got him because they were lower in the standings.

Bearden won his first major league game against the Nats, beating Washington, 4-0, at Griffith Stadium in the third week of the 1948 season.

He has been notably effective against the Nats. His only win this year was at their expense. Last year, he beat them twice.

Meinke Paces Georgetown Boys

Mickey Meinke pitched a seven-hitter and rapped out three hits, batting in four runs, to lead the Georgetown Lions Club in a Washington Boy's Club game yesterday on the Ellipse. The game was the first of a best-of-three series for the section 2 senior division championship.

Murphy's Esso downed Washington Flour, 6-2, to win the miget class title.

Ship Sunken

Kane's defeated The Ship, 6-1, in a Takoma Softball League game yesterday at the Takoma Playground. Pitcher Gene Stark hurled a five-hitter and banged out a bases-loaded double for the victors.

Shirley France Work Out Today

Dover, England, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—Shirley May France will attempt to swim halfway across the English Channel tomorrow, weather permitting, in the major tuneup for her attempt on the France to England swim later this month.

The 17-year-old swimmer said that if the channel continued choppy—the weather has been cold and windy for days—she will try to swim to Ramsgate instead.

DeJohn Outpointed

Schenectady, N. Y., Aug. 2 (AP).—Joey Taylor of Binghampton won a 10-round split decision tonight over Joey de John of Syracuse in the action-packed main event of a professional boxing show at McNearney Stadium.

Doby's 3 Homers, Lemon's 3-Hitter Rout Nats, 11-0

Tribe socked the 6 foot, 6½ inch rookie with a five-run cluster.

Pearce dusted off leadoff man Doby with an inside fast ball, worked him to 3-2 and finally walked him. Al Rosen walked and Gordon got a blooper to right filling the bases.

Doby scored while Bob Kennedy was grounding out, and Hegan's hit to short brought home Rosen. Whereupon Lemon powered a liner over the low right-center fence for the last three runs.

Doby had one more chance to shoot for the home run record of four in one game when he faced Washington's third hurler, Singleton in the eighth.

Singleton whipped two strikes past Doby, and then Larry watched two balls go by. With the crowd pulling for Doby to deliver, the slugger went down swinging at an inside curve.

After that first inning threat, Lemon was complete master of the Nats. He permitted only infield singles by Irv Noren in the sixth and Mickey Grasso in the eighth. He walked only two more, and whiffed eight Nats with seemingly no effort.

Marrero was charged with his seventh loss, he has won five.

In short—tonight was "barber's night," and the Indians' management provided a bottle of shampoo to every male customer. In addition, a barbershop quartet rendered a serenade before the first pitch, and 4836 clipsters from the Cleveand area sat in for free . . . The Nats enjoy a day of rest tomorrow, and send Lefty Bob Kuzava in the mound against the Tigers in Detroit Friday. Kuzava has a 5-7 record . . . The home run record of four in a game is held by Ed Delahanty, Lou Gehrig, Chuck Klein, Robert Lowe, and Pat Seerey.

Brentwood Methodists Win 2d Half Unbeaten

The Brentwood Methodists won the Prince Georges County Church Softball League second half championship by defeating the Hyattsville First Methodists, 7-4, yesterday at Riverdale. The victors finished the second half undefeated in seven games.

In another league game, Mount Rainier Christians defeated Hyattsville Pinkney Memorial first half champ, 12-5. Brentwood meets Pinkney Friday at 6:45 p. m. at Riverdale in the first of a best-of-three series for the league title.

Brooklyn Joins Minor Grid Loop

Brooklyn, Aug. 2 (AP).—Brooklyn took over a berth in the American Pro Football League today, replacing Wilmington, Del., which will not field a team this fall.

Wilmington, however, retains its franchise and is expected to compete again next season.

Mrs. Ewing's 71 Wins at Prince Georges

Mrs. Frank Ewing's 104-33—71 won low gross honors in ladies' day golf yesterday at Prince Georges. Mrs. Robert Ross took second low net with 88-16—72.

Mrs. Fred Chamison won low gross with 88. Mrs. K. F. Kuster of Bethesda won the guest low gross by shooting 91 while Mrs. John Crampton of Congressional registered 92-14—78 for the guest low net prize.

Tam O'Shanter Starts Today

Chicago, Aug. 2 (AP).—The cops have corraled slot machines at the Tam O'Shanter Country Club, but a $75,000 jackpot nevertheless will spill over the golf course within the next 10 days.

A record field of 400 pros, women and men amateurs has assembled for George S. May's telescoped $20,000 All-American and $55,000 "world" championship tourneys. Even as the golfers gathered, the Tam promoter was in a legal joust against a charge of keeping gaming devices, the slot machines.

The 10-day fairways marathon begins tomorrow with the All-American kickoff, including 43 feminine stars shooting the first round of a 72-hole route and 253 professionals scrapping for 56 tourney berths.

On Friday, the women will play their second round and 141 amateurs will tee off in their phase of the All-American. On Saturday, the All-American will be in full blast with 76 pros, tomorrow's qualifiers plus 20 hand-picked entries, playing for keeps.

The piece de resistance, the lush "world" championship, will begin a week from tomorrow.

Bidding on TV Rights for Series Tops $500,000

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—More than $500,000 has been bid for the television rights on the 1950 World Series, it was learned today, and the ultimate figure may reach $600,000.

This is exclusive of radio rights, which under the contract expiring in 1956 go for $175,000 this year.

Thus the commercial byproduct of the baseball classic will come close to or exceed $800,000. This compares well with total gate receipts for smaller series, such as $605,475 for the Giant-Yankee series of 1922 and $485,166 for the Cincinnati-New York series of 1939.

Export Control Office Is Recalling Workers Fired in Recent Months

Commerce's Export Control has started to recall employes who were fired over the past several months. The agency is to be rebuilt, as it will be given a major defense job.

Representatives of steel concerns are to confer today with Commerce officials to plan for the tightening up of steel exports. Next groups to be called in will be representatives of copper and nonferrous metal companies.

Export Control has had three major layoffs in the past six months. Status employes with up to 30 years of service have been fired. Outstanding discharge notices are now being canceled.

AFGE: Henry Iler yesterday was elected president of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes, and he was sworn in and took office immediately. He resigned as chairman of the appeals board of Labor's Bureau of Employes Compensation.

Only 11 of the union's 18 member executive council were present and voted at the extraordinary session to name a successor to James Yaden, who died several weeks ago. The vote was nine for Iler; one for Bernece Heffner, the union's secretary-treasurer, and one for John Murray, who resigned recently as director of the union's organization staff. Most of the seven missing members are pledged to support Iler.

Iler's victory yesterday makes him an odds-on bet to be re-elected for a full two-year term at the union's convention to be held next month in Omaha. A career civil servant, Iler can be expected to launch an organization drive to build the union into an even stronger position.

PHS: The House has approved a conference report to permit Public Health Service commissioned officers to be paid in cash for all annual leave in excess of 60 days.

NACA: Also approved by the House was a conference report to forbid the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics to hire aliens unless they are approved in advance by a security committee appointed by the NACA director.

LEAVE: The amendment by Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) to abolish and curtail annual and sick leave for classified and per diem employes was rejected by the Senate by an overwhelming voice vote.

VA: More than 2000 additional employes could be hired in hospitals of the Veterans Administration in a new budget request recommended to Congress yesterday by the President.

The President is seeking $8,225,000 additional for VA's hospital and medical program, mainly to staff new hospitals that will be completed during this fiscal year. The medical staff has been "frozen" at its present level for the past several months because of the threat of budget cuts. If Congress grants the fund request, VA will hire instead of fire.

GPO: The Senate Committee on Rules and Administration has approved the House bill to grant pay boosts to employes in the Government Printing Office's Congressional Record Index Office.

PBA: The Public Buildings Administration has staffs working here and in cities throughout the Nation to locate office space the Government may need for the expansion of military agencies.

MORE MONEY: Perhaps it's inflation, but demands for United States currency is at a record peak. Treasury reserves of currency have dropped to an "emergency" point. In fact, the Government may not be able to replace its own currency unless production is stepped up immediately.

The President has asked Congress to give the Bureau of Engraving and Printing $2,800,000 additional in order to turn out 20 million more sheets of currency than had been planned for the next year. The bureau would need to increase its staff and work some of its employes overtime if the money is approved.

Park Planners Veto Proposal to Raze Building for Parking

Commission Gives Four Reasons for Retaining Civil Service Quarters

National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday turned thumbs down on a proposal to raze the United States Civil Service Commission building to make way for a downtown parking facility.

The Commission cited four reasons for opposing the District Motor Vehicle Parking Agency's project:

1. The building located between 7th and 9th sts., F and H sts., nw., is an "architectural feature" of the city.
2. It is "well-located" for its activity which draws Government employes from all over the city; it is near public transportation.
3. The land which it occupies is assessed at $40 a square foot, or seven million dollars, while other tracts within a block or two, which could be condemned by the agency, are assessed at $5 to $10 a foot.
4. The 1000 employes located in the building bring business to the area.

The Commission reminded that the city agency has the authority from Congress to assemble land and lease it on a long-term basis for use as a parking facility.

Asks $75,000 for Survey

On the slum clearance front, the Commission announced it has asked the Housing and Home Finance Agency for $75,000 to study city areas in which to plan redevelopment.

In carrying out this survey, the Commission staff will cooperate with the National Capital Housing Authority which informed the Commission it is planning studies for 2000 low-cost housing units in Commission-designated redevelopment areas in the southeast and southwest and a limited section in the northwest.

The Commission completed an agreement for acquisition of land along the 3½ miles of the proposed George Washington Memorial Parkway from Key Bridge to the joint Arlington-Fairfax County line.

Addition to Playground

The planners also approved a contract for purchase of six acres of the Glover tract near 46th and Van Ness sts. and Massachusetts ave. nw. as an addition to the Friendship playground. This was part of the site of the Waves barracks during World War II.

The Commission directed its executive committee to workout an agreement whereby the old Peck Memorial Chapel, Pennsylvania ave., 28th and M sts. nw., would be purchased through the joint cash of Georgetown residents and the Commission and converted into an attractive gateway into the old city.

Summerald Hazard Hints

4 If you feel faint, don't try to ride it out and keep going. You may intensify the condition and fall, getting an injury.

Instead, lie down quickly or put your head between your knees. If another person faints, keep him lying down and lower his head. Loosen tight clothing. Sprinkle his face with cool water. Keep him quiet until recovery seems assured.

NE Triangle Zoning Bill Under Attack

Citizen Units Favor Proposal to Block Commerce, However

A Senate District Subcommittee took under advisement yesterday a bill aimed to block commercial development of a half-acre triangle, bounded by 18th and Taylor sts. and South Dakota ave. ne.

The action followed a morning hearing at which Northeast homeowners urged approval of the bill and District government officials opposed it.

The measure would authorize the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to purchase the tract—recently rezoned commercial—for park purposes or as a site for a memorial to South Dakota. It was sponsored by Senator Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.).

Backing the bill were representatives of the Northeast Council of Citizens Associations, Burroughs, and Michigan citizens' associations and the South Dakota State Society.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, for the Commissioners, and Thomas Settle, for NCPPC opposed the proposal on grounds it is a matter for the District Zoning Commission and passage of the bill would open the floodgate to similar proposals.

In other actions the Senate District Committee approved and sent to the Senate floor bills to permit Metropolitan Police to confiscate dangerous weapons and to fix the responsibility of the District auditor with regard to preparing vouchers.

The committee further postponed action on legislation to authorize completion of the Eastern High School Stadium. The Commissioners have recommended that the project be considered along with other school improvements in next year's budget.

Navy Bureau Flier Suffers Injuries In Crash Landing

A Navy Bureau of Aeronautics officer crash-landed his Hellcat fighter at Bolling Base yesterday, after his engine quit in landing at Anacostia Naval Air Station.

The pilot, Lieut. Comdr. Hugh Wood, 33, of Vienna, Va., suffered sevére lacerations to the right leg and two simple fractures of the lower vertebrate. Officers said his condition is not serious. Commander Wood is attached to the VA branch of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

Officers said he was approaching Anacostia's northeast runway at 200 feet when his engine failed. Unable to glide safely in, Commander Wood leveled his wings and landed in a grass field near the end of Bolling's northwest runway. The aircraft was buckled, a Navy spokesman said.

Truman Asks Labor Statute Checkup Here

President Truman asked Congress yesterday to make sure the District law is strong enough in regard to prohibitions against night employment of women and children under 18.

The suggestion went to the Capitol in a message calling attention to two conventions approved by the 1948 conference of the International Labor Conference.

The President said State Legislatures could handle the question; that possible Federal legislation need only be considered for the District since Congress is the District's governing body.

District officials reported existing law does not bar women from working nights in industries. The local child labor laws also do not conform completely with the convention, they said.

City officials are expected to make further checks into District statutes with Senate District Committee staff members with a view to possible action.

Wythe County Polio Strikes Woman, 51

Oldest Victim Yet In Epidemic Area; Toll Reaches 111

Wytheville, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—Polio struck its oldest victim of the year here today, and there were increasing signs of a spread of this stricken community's outbreak to other sections of southwest Virginia.

The five new cases listed by the State Health Department today from Wythe County included that of a 51-year-old woman, oldest to contract the disease in Virginia in 1950.

These latest figures boosted this hard-hit areas' total since July 1 to 111 cases. Twelve deaths also have been counted from the county, where the 23,000 inhabitants have been victims of the Nations worst outbreak.

Two other southwest Virginia counties listed cases today with the State Health Department. Franklin County reported its first case of the year, and Scott County had its second.

Two more fatal victims of the disease from nearby Pulaski County were reported to State officials today, sending the death rate in the county to three out of five cases.

The latest were Peggy Ann Rutherford, 2, and Nancy James Spence, 7, who died tonight at Roanoke Hospital.

Meanwhile, Wythe County authorities pushed a search for the persons who tore down highway signs warning of the severe polio out-break in this southwest Virginia community.

The signs, placed on major highways leading into Wythe County, have been replaced, and a reward for the conviction of the persons responsible for removing them has been offered by the Wytheville town council.

Wythe Epidemic 50 Times Worse Than Usual Rate

Wytheville, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis tonight described this polio-stricken community's outbreak as 50 times worse than the "accepted epidemic rate."

In a statement in New York, the National Foundation said all possible aid is being rushed to combat the outbreak.

D. C. Area Has 8 New Polio Cases; 91 This Year

Eight new poliomyelitis cases were reported in Greater Washington yesterday, bringing the number this year to 91.

The District Health Department reported two of the new cases. This brought the city's total to 45 as compared to 13 at this time last year. New District cases were: a 16-month-old girl being treated at her home in the 1000 block of 18th st. ne.; and a 20-month-old boy of the 2000 block of Maryland ave., ne., who was admitted to Children's Hospital yesterday.

The six other cases were reported in suburban Maryland—three in Montgomery County and three in Prince Georges.

Cases reported to the Montgomery County health department were: two girls, 16 and 19 years old, both of whom were being treated at their homes in Burtonville, and a 10-month-old boy of Lincoln Park, Rockville, admitted to Children's Hospital July 31.

The Prince Georges County health department reported the following cases (the date listed is when the person became ill): a 9-year-old boy of Clinton (July 30), Childrens Hospital; a 10-year-old boy of the 6000 block of Brooks rd., Hillside (July 19), Childrens Hospital; a 10-year-old boy of the 5600 block of Oxon Hill rd., Oxon Hill (July 29), Walter Reed Hospital.

MUSIC IN RAIN—Ronald K. Arnatt, organist, the sole accompanist for the pageant, donned a raincoat and doggedly stuck it out at his keyboard despite the intermittent showers during the rehearsal last night. Official Washington, led by the President and Mrs. Truman, is scheduled to attend the premiere in the Rock Creek Park amphitheater

Trumans Accept Invitation To Sesqui Drama Opening

The White House announced yesterday that President Truman and his family have accepted invitations for the Friday evening premiere of the Sesquicentennial drama, "Faith of Our Fathers."

The Paul Green pageant will open for the public the following night. The Friday evening performance will be for some 4000 recipients of invitations from the Sesquicentennial Commission.

Executive Producer L. Poe Leggette yesterday deflated speculation that the premier might have to be canceled because of production snags. "We're going on," he said.

Leggette did not discount the difficulties entirely. One big set may not be finished in time. Rain tonight might wash out the final dress rehearsal.

"However," Leggette added, "even if we had been rehearsing for six months, we'd be in the same boat if the final rehearsals were canceled."

Which brings up another point. The new Rock Creek Amphitheater, costing $563,000, was turned over to the producers on July 20, allowing little more than two weeks for rehearsal at the theater.

"This is no college play," said Leggette. "It is a tremendous thing. It needs drill, drill, drill. We wanted at least three weeks of rehearsal at the theater."

Stage crewmen, all college students, are putting in considerable overtime trying to get the sets finished for the opening. They've had to spend a few nights on cots at the amphitheater.

All this at the rate of from $35 to $40 per week. But Leggett pointed out that after the opening, they'll average about four hours work a night.

While rain may put a crimp in the final rehearsal, its effect on the actual performances will be less painful.

Only heavy and continuous downpours will wash out performances, Edward Boykin, member of the Sesqui Commission, said. The usual, brief summer showers, he said, can be waited out in the rain shelters built to keep about 3000 persons dry.

The drama will run through September.

Heat Wave's Back Broken (For a While)

After a high of 90 during the noon hour, Washington's heat wave started breaking yesterday, with the help of thundershowers, and is due to stay broken today.

The weatherman predicted a high of 84 today, which should make nobody unhappy after four days running of 90 or better. "Mostly fair and less humidity" is the rest of today's weather ticket.

Before the rains came yesterday the heat sent four persons to the hospital.

Admitted to Casualty Hospital were Pleasant Scott, believed to be about 61, of 105 R st. ne., and Robert Blackwell, 29, of 631 B st. ne., a Capital Transit Co. employe.

Treated and released were John Matthews, 58, of 400 Jefferson Davis hgwy, Arlington, at Emergency Hospital, and James Turner, 47, of 1515 P st. nw., at Freedman's Hospital.

The rain which started about mid-afternoon brought .25 inch by 5 p. m., according to unofficial measure, and the skies threatened more.

The more pleasant temperatures should be kept up, said Forecaster W. P. Day, by a mass of cool air which is sallying our way from central Canada.

Two new sea lions chose yesterday to arrive at the Zoo and take up habitation in the sea-lion pool down below the bear cages. They are three-year-old Steller seals and this brings the Zoo's sea lion population to five.

Fistfight Breaks Out After Falls Church Ousts City Manager

Dunn Is Replaced By Wells During Stormy Session Of City Council

In a special session highlighted by boos, hissing and a fist-fight among spectators, the Falls Church City Council last night ousted Acting City Manager Roy F. Dunn.

City Clerk Harry E. Wells, son of Councilman Sherman Wells, was named to replace him by a 6-2 vote. He was nominated by Councilman Karl Anderson, who said, "it is not my intention that Wells should permanently occupy the position."

After the meeting, however, Mayor Albert M. Orme said Wells would be employed "for an indefinite period."

The vote climaxed a heated hour-long wrangle. A resounding cheer came from Dunn supporters in the audience when Councilman Samuel McCrary tried to delay a vote on a motion to oust the acting city manager. Councilmen favoring Wells were booed and hissed.

At least five of the 75 spectators who packed the council room came to blows at the end of the meeting.

The disturbance, quelled after several minutes of wild blows and loud threats, apparently started between an unidentified man and William A. Van Allen, 606 Langston la. Then Dudley C. Bostwick, 402 N. West st., and W. H. Herring, sr., and his son, W. H. Herring, jr., 503 E. Columbus st., became embroiled.

The issue apparently was whether Dunn should be retained or not, with no feeling shown on Wells' appointment.

Mayor Orme, who opened the meeting, said it was necessary because of a legality involving $700,000 in school bonds recently sold by the city. Delivery of the bonds to the buyer, due August 15, cannot be made without the signature of the city manager, he said, while the signature of an acting city manager might be open to legal question.

Councilman McCrary, Dunn's chief supporter, first challenged legality of the meeting. Then he requested that the back minutes of the seven previous meetings, yet to be approved by the council, be read before new business was considered. Both motions were defeated.

Councilman Anderson, who said he still favors advertisement for a city manager, noted that a committee will meet tonight to work out details.

Voting for Wells were Mrs. Dillon S. Myer, Lee M. Rhoads, John C. McRae, J. H. McCarthy, Carl Hink and Anderson. Opposing him were James E. Durant and McCrary. Wells' father refrained from voting.

The new City Manager, who celebrated his thirty-third birthday yesterday, is married, has three children, and lives at 706 Poplar dr. in Falls Church. He attended Western High School, served five years in the Army Air Corps with time in the South Pacific during the last war.

After the war, Wells worked for six months at the Government Printing Office and then attended Virginia Polytechnic Institute for two years before becoming Falls Church clerk.

Dunn became the first Falls Church city manager in August of 1947. He formerly had been town manager of Wytheville, Va..

Trooper Arrests Murder Suspect Asleep in Auto

A Maryland State trooper's routine check of a man sleeping in an auto yesterday turned up a suspect wanted for murder in Atlanta, Ga., a year ago.

Trooper Guy Brown, patrolling the Washington-Baltimore Boulevard Tuesday night, came upon Henry Owens, 29, of Dumfries, Va., sleeping in an auto near Waterloo Barracks. When Owens couldn't prove he owned the auto, Brown took him into the barracks.

In Owens' wallet, Brown said, was a newspaper account of a July 3, 1949, murder in Atlanta. Brown sent Owens' fingerprints to the FBI. Yesterday the FBI replied that Owens is wanted for murder in Atlanta.

Man Is Killed By Truck as He Fixes Flat

E. F. Smith Victim In Arlington; Two Hospitalized in D. C.

An Arlington man was fatally injured while changing a tire and two other persons were hospitalized in separate traffic accidents yesterday afternoon.

The victim was Eugene F. Smith, 56, a part-owner of the Alcova Motor Co., 3601 Columbia Pike, Arlington. Police said he was changing a left rear tire on Columbia Pike, just west of the Old Dominion railway tracks, when struck.

Mr. Smith

Police reported he was hit by a truck belonging to Barcroft Cleaners, driven by Ross L. Cudd, 28, of West Groveton st., Alexandria.

Cudd told police he was driving about 25 miles an hour east on the Pike, and was about to swing around Smith, when a third car crowded him. Cudd said he applied his brakes, but skidded on the wet pavement into Smith.

No Charges

No charges were placed against Cudd, who was released on personal bond for a hearing at a later date.

Smith, who lived at 3316 2d rd., North Arlington, is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Faulkner Smith, and a daughter, Mrs. Lois Davis, both of the home; another daughter, Mrs. Francis Vlkert, of 511 S. Wayne st., Arlington; a son, John Smith, a seaman in the United States Coast Guard; a sister, Mrs. Estelle Blow, of Freemont, N. C., and two grandchildren.

In another accident, two persons were injured—one critically—in a collision at Branch and Pennsylvania aves. se.

Skids Into Tree

Police reported a car driven by Howard I. Smith, 65, of the United States Soldiers Home, skidded into a tree and bounced backward, with its rear striking the left side of another, operated by Norman Krautz, 36, on Tonawanda, N. Y.

Both Smith and his passenger, Jane Smith, 15, a relative, of 817 G st. ne., were hospitalized. The girl was in critical condition at Casualty, with concussion and a fractured skull, while Smith was transferred to the Old Soldiers Hospital with arm and leg injuries.

In a Wednesday evening accident, Grace Sterling, 37, of 2426 61 st. ne., a passenger in a car driven by William Bledsoe, 44, of 111 F st. nw., lost possible use of an eye, police said.

The car in which she was riding bumped into the back of another car which halted suddenly at a stop sign on Fairfax rd., Arlington, police reported.

Arthritis Causes Listed At Chiropractors' Meeting

Chiropractors, in national assembly here, yesterday tackled the causes of arthritis, and put their fingers on: Pasteurized milk. Smoking. The menopause. Fear. Inoculations, vaccinations and the antibiotics. And picky eating.

Though the causes varied widely, there was no dispute on the "proper" treatment. For, as the panel discussion chairman said: "Treatment by spinal adjustment is the thing that follows by necessity."

Yesterday's panel discussion was an added attraction to the week-long convention of practitioners of the art of ridding body disorders by manipulating the joints, mainly the spine. Some 2500 chiopractors and their guests are attending the meetings on the fifth-fifth anniversary of National Chiropractic Convention at Hotel Statler.

Heading yesterday's discussion was Dr. W. A. Budden of Portland, Oreg., chairman of the organization's council on public health and research.

Dr. Budden explained that chiropractic research is "greatly hampered" by State laws which license the profession.

Dr. William Budreau of Miami, Fla., blamed pasteurization of milk, which he said removes about half the calcium content, as one cause of arthritis. He also blamed "irritants" of smoking, which he said stimulated the parathyroid gland to overproduction.

Bottled-up emotions, mostly fear, were blamed by Dr. Herman Schwartz of Long Island, N. Y., as "playing a part in arthritis." Fear, he explained, stimulates the glandular system, and "is bound to affect man's organisms."

The menopause, or change of life period for women, was blamed for much of arthritis' cause by Dr. Milton Higgens, of Couer-d-Alene, Idaho, while Dr. Margaret Schmidt, of Seattle, Wash., said she was able to trace many cases of arthritis in children to "picky eating."

Atomic Energy Devices Used In Detecting Common Cold

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—A Johns Hopkins scientist today reported he and his associates have discovered a new and important tool in the long search for something that will prevent or cure the common cold.

Using a Geiger counter and radioactive phosphorous from the atomic plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn., they have found out how to tell whether a half-hatched chicken egg has a cold.

Dr. Thomas G. Ward of the Hopkins public health school told of the discovery in the American Journal of Hygiene.

It is important because so far there has been no way of detecting simply whether a laboratory specimen contained the cold virus.

The only way to find out was to inject the matter into human volunteers under complicated and carefully controlled conditions and see if they developed colds. It took time, and each test series cost around $1000.

The new technique is still complicated and takes at least a day, but it can be done in the laboratory.

Ward indicated he already has learned new things about the common cold with his Geiger counters and radioactive phosphorous. He is not ready to talk about them yet because he hasn't had time for enough experiments to convince him they are true.

The idea of using atomic energy chemistry for detecting the cold virus first took shape in March, 1949, when Ward chanced to talk about it in Chicago to a friend from Oak Ridge.

The research chain started with washings from the nose of an Oak Ridge worker who had a heavy cold. The fluid was injected into chicken eggs that had been under incubation for seven days.

5 Maryland Officials Unopposed in Election

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 2 (AP).—With the deadline for filing passed, Maryland's State Comptroller and four circuit judges have no candidates opposing them for reelection in the fall.

It is possible that the Republicans can take legal steps and get someone on the ballot in November against J. Millard Tawes, veteran Eastern Shore Democratic leader who holds the comptroller's office.

But the four circuit judges seem sure of holding their posts without the necessity of an election campaign. They are J. Deweese Carter in the Second Circuit on the upper Eastern Shore; Benjamin Michaelson of the Fifth Circuit, which includes Anne Arundel, Carroll and Howard Counties; Charles W. Woodward of the Sixth Circuit, which includes Frederick and Montgomery Counties, and J. Dudley Diggs of the Seventh Circuit in southern Maryland.

Attorney General Hall Hammond, a Democrat, goes on the ballot in November with no opponent in the primary elections September 18.

So do three of Maryland's six Congressmen—Representative Edward T. Miller, a Republican, who represents the First District; Lansdale G. Sasscer, Democrat, Fifth District, and J. Glenn Beall, Republican, Sixth District.

All will have opponents in the general election. Sasscer's rival will be Tom Carr, Annapolis radio station operator, the only Republican to file.

James P. S. Devereux, retired Marine general who was the hero of Wake Island, gets the Republican nomination in the Second District in the same manner.

Louis R. Millio and James W. Miller get the Republican nominations in two Biltimore congressional districts as unopposed candidates, Milio in the Third and Miller in the Fourth.

Other candidates for each Statewide office and circuit judgeships (x-denotes incumbent):

Governor:
Democrats—Harry Kemper, Baltimore; William Preston Lane, jr., Hagerstown (x); Herbert W. Larrabee, Glen Burnie; George P. Mahoney, Owings Mills; Stephen B. Peddicord, Baltimore.

U. S. Senate:

Attorney General:

In Prince Georges

County GOP Ticket Lacks 1 Candidate

A late filing, minutes before Tuesday's midnight deadline, filled one of two remaining holes on the Republican ballot for Prince Georges County elections.

Alvin L. Beall, Ardmore farmer, turned in his candidacy for clerk of the Circuit Court at the home of James B. Berry, clerk to the Board of Election Supervisors, at 11:45 p. m. Beall is a brother of Carlton G. Beall, GOP nominee for sheriff.

The only candidate now who does not face a contest in the November 7 elections is Ben Dyer, Democratic nominee for county surveyor.

Another last minute filing was that of Vinton D. Cockey of Laurel for Democratic nomination for county commissioner. Cockey is now county surveyor, the post for which Dyer received party backing.

A total of eight primary fights are scheduled for September 18. Five will be on the Democratic ballot and three on the Republican. In the general election 21 county offices will be at stake.

Smokey Honored; New Arrival Applauds . . .

MADE PATROLMAN—Smokey, the bear cub who survived a forest fire, yesterday received a white canvas belt, badge and membership card in the A.A.A. School Safety Patrol in a Zoo ceremony attended by officials of the United States Forestry Service and the American Automobile Association. Smokey, slightly bewildered, chewed on the belt as Raymond E. Marsh, acting chief of the Forest Service, explained: "We believe that the boys and girls who serve in School Safety Patrols can help materially in preventing forest fires and protecting wildlife." He pointed out 9 of 10 forest fires are man-caused and preventable

The Washington Post

COOL AND CALM—While the group sweltered through the presentation ceremony at Smokey's quarters, a recent arrival at the park, a sea lion, enjoyed the cooling waters of his pool. He repeatedly dove under, glided out to the middle and then swished back. At the edge of the pool, he would come up, his whiskers twitching; and then he would wave his flippers and bark. It sounded suspiciously like a bronx cheer

300 New Men Required by Police Force

A stepped-up police recruiting program to line up 300 new men for the higher manpower needs of a five-day week was announced yesterday by Inspector Walter T. Storm, acting police chief.

At the same time Inspector Clarence Lutz, head of the Police Training School, said he thought a new Civil Service examination might be needed to provide enough recruits.

He urged more Washington men "who know the city" to apply for the exam if it is held.

A bill giving police the five-day week now awaits President Truman's signature.

Congress is expected to pass a special deficiency appropriation bill providing enough money to hire the 300 needed to man the five-day week schedule.

Inspector Storm said the department hopes to get the men from a roster of 900 who passed the last written Civil Service exam in 1949.

Lutz, who runs the police physical exams for new recruits, said about 50 men a week normally take the physical during department recruiting programs.

Last week, though, 100 were examined and Lutz said this week's target is 200 men.

The mortality rate in such examinations is high. In 1948 415 men took the police physical and only 84 passed it.

At that time the department was forced to lower the physical requirements and to recruit candidates from as far away as Pennsylvania. Physical standards since have been restored.

According to Inspector Lutz, the police training program also is being stepped up. He said 40 men are expected to graduate August 14. By then, he added, he hopes to have enough men examined to start another 40-man class at once.

30,000 Using Shirley Hwy. In Arlington

A daily average of about 30,000 automobiles are using the Arlington County end of Shirley Memorial Highway, preliminary figures from a Virginia Department of Highways survey showed yesterday.

K. G. McWane, the department's traffic and planning engineer, said the survey is under way the whole length of the new expressway.

Purpose: to find out where motorists using the highway are headed and where they come from.

The idea, as McWane explained it, is to check on the travel habits of motorists, to find out how far people will go out of their way to use an expressway and when they'll use alternate roads, instead.

Ultimate figures will show whether such expressways are justified, McWane said, and whether others are needed, and where. It will be months, he said, before any conclusions can be gathered from figures now being collected.

The eight-day traffic survey along the Arlington stretch of Shirley Highway ended Tuesday, county police said. Today, motorists will be asked the where-from, where-to question at the intersection of Route 236 and the expressway.

Funeral Today

Bro. Owen, Ex-Actor, Dies at 63

A solemn high requiem mass will be sung at 9 a. m. today at the Franciscan Monastery for William Reardon, 63, who five years ago turned from a colorful life as an actor, sports enthusiast and hotel manager to enter the monastery as Brother Owen.

Burial will be in the Franciscan Cemetery.

Brother Owen died Tuesday at Providence Hospital. He had entered the monastery on December 5, 1945, after training for the novitiate at St. Anthony's Monastery in Cincinnati.

Weighing 250 pounds, he kept up his contact with the outside world from his monastery post at a booth by the front door, from which he sold visitors postcards, guidebooks, rosaries, and crucifixes.

Associates at the monastery said he had often acted on stages across the country and on Broadway.

He thus came to know many figures of the sports and entertainment fields. He worked in several hotels, including the Stanley Hotel in New Britain, Conn., where he was assistant manager.

Many of his friends remembered him when he entered the monastery here. Last winter, Actress Mae West, while appearing in Baltimore in "Diamond Lil," gave a dinner with Brother Owen as guest of honor.

About the same time, the New York Knickerbockers basketball team honored him with a dinner here when they came to town to play the Washington Capitols.

$950 Judgment Against Attorney Goes to His Rival

The $950 judgment Mrs. Anna T. (Dolly) Keleher got from her old attorney, Charles E. Ford, will go to his rival James J. Laughlin, Judge James R. Kirkland of District Court ruled yesterday.

Ford was assessed the judgment by a District Court jury after Mrs. Keleher, whom he once represented in her marital difficulties, charged she had left $6450 with him and that he kept it illegally, part as his fee. Laughlin represented Mrs. Keleher in the suit.

Laughlin then claimed the $950 as his legal fee, despite the fact that seven merchants tried to garnishee the judgment. Judge Kirkland, however, ruled that attorneys' fees constituted a lien prior to that claimed by the merchants.

Luigi Cardinal Lavitrano Dies at 76

Vatican City, Aug. 2 (AP).—Luigi Cardinal Lavitrano, 76, died today at Castel Gandolfo, where Pope Pius XII has his summer residence.

Cardinal Lavitrano

He had been running a high fever for several days.

His death reduced the membership of the Roman Catholic College of Cardinals to 53. Its maximum is 70.

Cardinal Lavitrano was prefect of the Congregation of the Religious, 1 of 11 congregations that govern Catholic Church affairs. A native of Forio D'Ischia, an island near Naples, he started studying for the priesthood soon after he was orphaned by an earthquake at the age of 9.

He was made a bishop of diocese of Cava and Sarno in 1914 and was elevated to the cardinalate in 1929.

Diseases Brought By White Men Whip Eskimos

By the United Press

From more than 3000 to less than 40 is the tragic story of a once sturdy band of nomadic Eskimos facing extinction in northern Alaska.

It is all because of white man's diseases.

This vanishing race of rugged hunters at one time roamed the frozen wastelands from the Brooks Mountains to the Arctic coast, according to Ralph Solecki, Smithsonian Institution anthropologist.

Today all that remains is two family groups living in the foothills of the mountains, following essentially the way of life of their ancestors.

Known as the Nunatagmiuts, these Eskimos unusually were tall and possessed with a somewhat advanced culture, considering the formidable environment in which they lived.

The couple has six other children.

No Decision Yet On District Milk Sterilization

District Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger conferred with his bureau chiefs yesterday on the milk issue of chemical sterilization but announced no decision.

District Commissioners Tuesday turned down Seckinger's recommendation that chemicals be put on an equal basis with steam for use in sterilizing dairy farm equipment. Instead, they decided farms using steam should be given a higher rating and directed Seckinger to decide what the difference should be.

Seckinger had proposed chemical sterilization as a means of assuring an adequate milk supply after September 1 when imported "emergency" milk will be banned from the District. His proposal set off a dispute between independent dairies, which supported it, and the Milk Producers Association, which opposed it.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Is Despondent Since Five Medical Schools Rejected His Application for Training; Wife Asks Whether to Act Sympathetic or Impatient

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I are facing the first real trial of our married life. Until two weeks ago we were very happy, confident that he would be accepted in medical school, and making plans around that.

Dan had applied to five medical schools, but now he has received rejections from all of them, despite the fact that he had good grades and met the other requirements. It never occurred to him that he wouldn't be accepted; and as it is financially impossible to wait and apply again next year, he is at a loss to know what to do.

At present he is doing nothing but staying at home, which didn't bother me at first, as I make a good salary, sufficient to carry us for a while. Also, I felt he had earned a rest and needed time to rally from his big disappointment. But now two weeks have passed and still he hasn't made a move to get a job, nor shown any interest in another vocation. I am afraid I am beginning to resent this attitude and to think he lacks initiative and isn't meeting his responsibilities.

I've even got the impression that he wants to feel sorry for himself; a martyr, I guess you'd say. Then I feel ashamed for thinking that. But he broods so much nowadays and doesn't seem to think of me at all—only of himself and how hurt he's been. We always talked things over before, but now he won't discuss our future and walks away when I reason that our hopes were too high, or that we shouldn't give up just now.

I don't know whether to sympathize, or say nothing and let him work out the problem, or be stern and tell him he has "reacted" long enough and has obligations to meet. He is rather nervous and emotional and reacts to trifles. When all goes well, his spirits soar; but when things go against him he is in the depths. He finds it very difficult to make decisions and stand by them; he tends to vacillate. I am just the opposite. Please help me to know what to do in this crisis. E. G.

Is He Rejecting Wife's Demands?

DEAR E. G.: Dan's behavior is very peculiar, and I think he is angrily trying to give you a hard time. It occurs to me that possibly he never truly wanted to be a doctor. Maybe you determinedly picked that role for him. Or if it isn't that specific, perhaps your plans for him (i. e., your unconscious demands on him) are ill suited to his native talents. If so, he would resent the goading pressure of your overly ambitious expectations, and might unconsciously welcome and dramatize circumstantial interference with your designs.

For purposes of discussion, however, let's assume that Dan's heart was set on being a doctor. Naturally, then, he would feel badly about a series of turndowns from medical schools, just when he is poised to enroll. But considering the traditional bottleneck in this more or less deliberately restricted field of study—a situation aggravated and highlighted by the recent GI stampede to college—a rejected contender can't logically cry "persecution!" when by-passed.

For example, the admissions office of a leading medical school in Washington, D. C., discloses that approximately 3000 students apply there annually for medical training. And only about 90 to 100 are accommodated.

You'll find much the same scoring all over, which shows how great are the odds against getting a toehold in the profession, and what a backwash of disappointment sweeps the ranks of contenders each year. But bona-fide aspirants are prepared for obstacles, reverses and slow going; because the hallmark of genuine interest in any specialty consists in knowing what you are heading into. And if Dan wasn't prepared to "try, try again," and to support himself through discouragements, then his approach to medicine was perfunctory (hence indifferent) to say the least.

No Desire to Be Big Shot

AS I SAID to start, it is my impression that Dan is using the educational roadblock as an excuse to stage a sitdown strike against your push to make a big shot of him, so that you may coast through life on his prestige. He is aware of your pump-priming interest in him, and too resistant and resentful of it to deal rationally with events at this time.

As I see the picture, Dan is psychoneurotic and you are his opposite number, having neurotic traits that dovetail with him—each wanting conjugal support the other can't give. Thus I feel you jointly need psychiatric help, in learning right values, and the techniques of mature cooperation in intimate relationship. Without this your marriage can't long endure. The present crisis makes that clear. M. H.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN was host to the teen-age delegates of the Girls Nation yesterday at the White House. The Girls Nation president, 17-year-old Marvella Hern (right) of Enid, Okla., and vice president, Sally McFague of Milton, Mass., gave Mr. Truman a Citation of Citizenship. Girls Nation Delegates Honor Chief Executive For Devotion to Peace

By Norma Lanum

PRESIDENT TRUMAN yesterday received a Citation for Citizenship from the 98 pretty teenage delegates to the Girls Nation.

The girls, two of them from each State and Panama, paid their call to the President shortly before noon. It was part of their six-day school for citizenship arranged by the American Legion Auxiliary.

After all the girls had shaken hands with the Chief Executive in his large office in the White House, they filed out into the adjoining rose garden. There the newly elected Girls Nation president, Marvella Hern, a 17-year-old farm girl from Enid, Okla., handed the citizenship award to Mr. Truman.

It cites his "loyalty and service to his country and his devotion to the cause of peace." Also the girls gave him a scroll containing all their names.

The Chief Executive got an extra gift from Mary Elizabeth Britt of Thomaston, Ga. It was a Georgia peach seed tied with a bright red ribbon and inscribed to "the best President ever—may God bless you."

President Truman commended the girls on their interest in American Government and assured them that women are just as "important politically" as men.

He continued, with a twinkle in his eyes, "If any of these good looking young ladies asked me to vote for her, I am happy to say I would not be able to resist."

The girls responded with loud applause and then, as the President turned to leave, burst into song—

"Raise our voices, raise them high,
Sing to Girls State, and here's why,
Look to Girls State and you'll find
Tomorrow's leaders of mankind."

The President hesitated and then backed into his office. But the girls kept on singing:

"We are the future builders, builders in a band—"

Finally they were ushered back through the executive offices and out to their chartered buses that carried them to Mount Vernon Seminary.

Their visit with the President was the most exciting adventure of their stay, despite the fact they had to wait out in the hot driveway quite a while before being summoned by the President's aide.

Miss Hern was sworn in as president and Miss Sally McFague of Milton, Mass., was sworn in as vice president of Girls Nation at the closing ceremonies of the conference last night at the seminary. The girls will return to their home States today.

HOW TO GET A HUSBAND

PETUNIA!

I soak 'em and file 'em
And paint 'em and such,
But I never achieve
That professional touch!

The reason is probably your cuticle, Petunia. If you'd make a firm habit of pushing it back with a towel—EVERY TIME YOU DRY YOUR HANDS—you'd be amazed at the wonderful difference it makes.

Simplest Way Is Best In Laundering New Summer Dress Fabrics

NEW DRESS fabrics—perfected in the recent peaceful past—have been bringing pleasure this summer even to people worried about Korea and the hydrogen bomb.

One of these is pretty seersucker organdy, about which Mrs. R. E. T. writes. She is a bit concerned about its laundry but will find the simplest way the best way with this material.

DEAR ANNE:

I would appreciate suggestions as to how a seersucker organdy dress should be washed and ironed so as not to destroy the "crinkleness" of the seersucker.

Note: This "crinkleness" is so soft I fear it may be easily pressed out, which would probably ruin the dress in addition to making it much too large.

Mrs. R. E. T., Quantico, Va.

Tub the dress as you would any other fine material—with mild soap and lukewarm water. Rinse and hang by the shoulders to dry, either on a rust-proof hanger or by pinning shoulders to line. Straighten out dress with the hands, smoothing it into shape. If additional smoothing is needed around collar, cuffs, etc., wait until it is bone dry, then press at these points with an iron that is barely warm.

DEAR ANNE:

What sort of curtains, draperies, or shades could I use on the glassed-in front of a rambler facing west? It is shaded by a 3-foot overhang. The front takes in the whole living room. The panes are approximately 24 by 18.

Mrs. J. C., Washington.

As I understand it, this is a sort of "window wall." Traverse drapes which can be drawn back on their long rod to either side of the windows would be appropriate. Heavy drapery material can be used, with or without a valance across the top. At night or when the sun is shining in the West, these draperies can be drawn together over the windows.

Another idea—to soften the rays of the sun and give you more privacy—would be to have sheer draw curtains underneath the heavy ones. These could be kept drawn most of the time, so that passersby (if any) couldn't peer in, but you would still enjoy all the lighting advantages of the wide window expanse.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you advise me if there are dressmaking shops in Washington, D. C., that would fit dresses only, that I am making, for a fee.

M. A. Smith, Washington.

I don't know of any that make a regular practice of this. However, some of the people listed under "Dressmakers" in the yellow pages of the phone book are willing to do it occasionally. One to whom I talked said she would charge about $2 a dress for such a service. I suggest that you call several that are conveniently located for you and talk the matter over with them.

DEAR ANNE:

I would like to plan a buffet, out-door garden party, but feel like giving up the idea when I think of the flies that hover about the food. What do others do to keep the food clean and the flies away?

Anxious, Washington.

DDT spray is wonderful stuff! If you thoroughly spray the area where you plan to have your party, you should be able to keep most insects at bay during the entertainment. Give the vicinity a good spraying an hour or two before the party. Bring the food out just before serving, too, so it won't be standing around to attract any passing flies.

DEAR ANNE:

How can I remove soap scum from a tile wall? Constant Reader, Washington.

If scratchless cleansing powder won't take off the scum, then use a mixture of cream of tartar and hydrogen peroxide. Make this up into a soft paste and rub on the tiles. Leave it until the scum beneath is soft enough to rub off with a stiff brush. Scrub with soap and water and rinse with clear water.

DEAR ANNE:

Could you please find out for me where I may purchase a pair of (trade mark deleted) letter scales? They are scales with a disc about 5 inches across with a metal tap to which a letter is attached for determination of weight.

Eleanor J. Durrett, Commander, U.S. Navy.

A lot of local stationers sell small letter scales, but I haven't found one with the make you mention. A shop with a scale that works on a similar principal, comes in a leather case, and sells for $2 can be reached by telephoning Michigan 1200.

DEAR ANNE:

We are searching for a Navajo rug. Is there any place in town that sells them?

J. C., Alexandria, Va.

You can find these in the Indian Shop run by the United States Department of the Interior. It is located on the first floor of the new Interior Building on C st., between 18th and 19th, nw.

Alice Longworth Heads West; Frances Browder Is Bride

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

MRS. NICHOLAS LONGWORTH said au revoir to Washington yesterday and headed West—to the ranch she's been going each summer for the last dozen years. There, for the next two months, she'll ride every day — her only sport and her favorite exercise since she was lifted into the saddle. In a couple of years Alice Longworth says she's looking forward to riding with her only grandchild—little Joan—4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Sturm of Westport, Conn.

MRS. LONGWORTH

Mrs. Longworth has just returned from Cincinnati, where with the sale of the old Longworth house completed, she has severed all ties with the late Speaker Longworth's home.

Miss Browder, Lieut. Nibley Wed

THE MARRIAGE of Miss Frances Elizabeth Browder, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Maurice Eugene Browder, to Lieut. Owen Smoot Nibley, USAF, son of Mrs. Karl J. Hardy of Washington and Carlyle Nibley of Los Angeles, took place yesterday at 1 p. m. in St. David's Episcopal Chapel in Spring Valley. The Rev. Albert E. Taylor officiated.

Due to illness in the family, only members of the immediate family attended the ceremony and the buffet luncheon which followed at the home of the bride's parents on Bancroft pl.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an afternoon dress of beige chiffon and lace over pale pink taffeta and a small white and beige feather hat. She carried a white prayer book with stephanotis and lilies of the valley.

Miss Josie Keebler was her only attendant and Carlyle Nibley was his brother's best man.

The bride, a debutante of the 1948-49 season, is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry A. Mathews of Washington and the late Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Fiske Browder of Indianapolis. She is the great niece of the former majority leader of the Senate, Senator James E. Watson. Following her graduation from Holton Arms she attended Sweet Briar College and George Washington University. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority.

MRS. OWEN NIBLEY

Lieutenant Nibley is the grandson of the late Senator and Mrs. Reed Smoot of Salt Lake City. He was educated in Washington schools, among them Avondale Military School and Columbia Preparatory School. He was graduated from the United States Military Academy in the class of 1950.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Nibley left for Hot Springs, Va., before going to the bridegroom's new post at Perrin Air Force Base, Sherman, Tex.

Silver-Haired Louise Is 'Perfect 18'

She's Model Choice for Matrons

By Dorothea Cruger

YOUTH doesn't corner all the glamor in Washington's modeling business. A silver-haired grandmother who wears a size 18 dress and wouldn't dream of dieting is one of this town's most popular and sought-after models.

She is Mrs. Louise Gormley, 53-year-old "matronly model," who displays older fashions in a local specialty store's lunchtime fashion parade. She works along with scores of lovely teen-age models who sport debutante outfits, but unlike these slim-as-a-reed girls, she has not a single figure problem, and lives untroubled by calorie counting or waist-whittling. "Why, the store wouldn't care if I went up to a size 20 or larger," she laughs.

What Is Louise Wearing?

THE truth of the matter is that there is a great demand for matronly women to show clothes to their own age group. For these women, although they may enjoy watching cute young things posing in the latest styles, realize that they won't look like that themselves in the clothes they eventually buy. And since there is a shortage of these models, the older women come in droves to admire what Louise, as they call her, is wearing. They ask about every detail of her ensemble, and whether they can look as well in a particular number as she does. Not only do they inquire about the price, size and quality of the outfits she models, but they also query her on more personal matters.

"I hardly have any privacy left," Louise chuckles. "They want to know whether I diet or exercise, what kind of girdle I wear, and how I fix my hair."

Dealing cheerfully with customers comes easy to Louise, who was a saleswoman until friends urged her to try modeling, at the age of 40 plus. She appeared weekly in shows at the Raleigh Hotel, until the store where she once sold grabbed her as a full-time model.

Likes Black and Navy

THE store gives her a free hand in choosing the five or six ensembles she models each day during the fashion parade season. Usually she selects dresses with soft lines, for she believes very tailored clothes are not for the older woman. Black and navy are her mainstays, since she finds them more flattering, and she vigorously denies that they are hotter in summer.

Her ambition: To open a store just for women who wear size 38 through 44, whom she believes have too long been neglected by the fashion industry.

MRS. LOUISE GORMLEY

Fairfax Heads Hear Attack On Commission

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors yesterday was called on to "repudiate" the 21-member commission it delegated last May to study the county's government with a view to recommending possible changes.

Frank M. Russell, a vice president of the National Broadcasting Co., in a letter read before the board's regular meeting at Fairfax, charged the commission was "openly and purposely" conceived to oppose the county manager form of government.

Whether to establish a county manager form of government will be decided in an impending referendum, the date of which has not been set.

Russell's four-page letter was received by the board without action or discussion. He appeared in behalf of the Fairfax County Committee for Good Government.

Russell, who lives at Munson Hill, near Falls Church, assailed the method by which the commission was established, criticized the conduct of its recent hearings and asserted he "has no illusions" about the type of report the commission will submit. He asked the supervisors to ignore the report and lend their support to the county manager plan.

Russell charged the commission was established at the suggestion of Manning Gasch, "a known bitter opponent of the county manager plan." He said Gasch himself was set up as a "clearing house" for membership on the commission. He said county civic organizations refrained from nominating members of the committee because the manner in which it was formed "raised grave doubt as to the sincerity" of the supervisors' determination that the commission would be nonpartisan.

He charged further that the conduct of meetings by the commission had been "high-handed and arrogant," and said preference had been given to speakers who were known opponents of the county-manager plan.

He also questioned the propropriety of State Senator Andrew W. Clarke's membership on the commission. Clarke is a known opponent of the county-manager plan, he said, and should not have accepted a place upon the commission.

BLS Reports Drop In Wholesale Prices

Wholesale prices are declining slightly this week, judging by the Bureau of Labor Statistics' index of 28 selected commodities.

The Bureau announced yesterday that last Friday's revised index figure was 303.8—meaning that the average of the 28 commodities was 303.8 percent of the August 1939 level. This was the peak for the year thus far.

Since then, the index has dropped to 303.0 Monday and 302.5 yesterday.

On June 23, just before the Korean fighting began, the index was 264.

Colombia Sets $150,000 for Currie Study

Colombia will pay Lauchlin Currie $150,000 for making a "Little Hoover Commission" report on that nation's governmental administration.

As a consultant for the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, Currie last year headed a team that surveyed the country's economy. In March of this year the Colombian government asked for his release to take on the "Little Hoover" job, but the bank would not grant it until last month, when his economic report was finally completed and edited. It will be released August 13 and will make no recommendation for any loan, a bank official said.

From the $150,000 fee, Currie will have to pay the cost of hiring a staff of about eight experts to help him make the administrative survey. Currie was a White House staff member from 1939 until 1945.

Josiah Marvel Named Head of Claims Body

President Truman yesterday nominated Josiah Marvel, jr., of Wilmington, Del., former Ambassador to Denmark, to be chairman of the new International Claims Commission in the State Department.

The commission will handle claims of foreign governments against the United States.

As members of the commission, Mr. Truman nominated former representative Raymond S. McKeough (D., Ill.) of Chicago, and Roy G. Baker of Denton, Tex., former president of the Young Democratic Clubs of America.

Maryland County Heads Vote Cooperation With Tax Groups

Full cooperation with State tax officials in formulation of a tax assessment program was voted yesterday by the County Commissioners of the Western Shore of Maryland.

The resolution was introduced by Jerrold V. Powers, Prince Gorges, and Irving G. McNayr, Montgomery. It directed the group's legislation committee to continue a study of the problem and to cooperate with the Case Tax Revision Commission and the State Tax Commission.

The organization, representing the county officials of the 15 Western Maryland counties, met at the officers club of the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, with the Montgomery County Council as host.

Consensus was that the State Tax Commission has been functioning well in equalizing assessments throughout the State but that large increases in assessments would be made simultaneously instead of at 5-year intervals.

Members of the committee are: Ulysses G. Hooper, Frederick; Walter Bennett, Carroll; W. Lee Linkous, Harford; William Lemmett, Allegany and Frank Curtis, Howard.

Albert Ward of the State Tax Commission earlier warned the commissioners against too liberal tax exemptions. He pointed out that the counties, which once supported the State and received no aid, now require large contributions from the State.

If the counties had paid their own way without State aid in 1948, he said, their tax rates would have been considerably higher—in some cases more than double.

Fyfe Resigns Boys' Club Post After 20 Years; Casassa Named

Charles M. Fyfe, executive director of the Washington Boys' Club for the past 20 years, resigned yesterday to enter private business.

Fyfe

In making this announcement, Club President E. K. Morris said Paul E. Casassa will be the new executive director, and Arthur (Charlie) Reynolds, assistant executive director.

Thousands of youngsters have come to know and respect Charlie Fyfe during his 30-year association with the club. During his tenure, Marris said, the club grew from 200 boys with assets of $23,000 to present membership of over 4000 and assets of over one million dollars.

Casassa, 42, of 1446 Irving st. nw., entered boys work in 1937 with the D. C. Recreation Department. He became associated with the Washington Boys Club in 1933 as physical director of the Western branch. He was named director of the Western branch in 1942.

$2,000,000 Bond Issue Urged For Prince William Schools

School Superintendent R. Worth Peters said yesterday that Prince William County's school building program is in "desperate" shape and urged a two million dollar bond issue to save it.

He told a joint meeting of the County Board of Supervisors and the School Board in Manassas that the bond issue could replace an earlier request to the State Literary Loan Fund for a similar sum.

Peters pointed out that action on the loan application probably would not be forthcoming in time to meet the county's overcrowded school emergency.

Three of the four supervisors—Jack Fick, R. S. Hall, and J. Carl Kincheloe—agreed with Peters on the bond issue proposal. The fourth member, Chairman J. Murray Taylor, had no comment at present.

School Board members also agreed on the need of a bond issue, but two of them, Mrs. Olive Hooker and Jack Alvey, predicted opposition in their districts.

Neither body acted yesterday on Peters' proposal, but the School Board said it would re-examine school construction needs, set an exact bond figure, and present it to the Board of Supervisors in late August or early September.

KOREA

ITS IMPACT ON U. S. PUBLIC OPINION

Tomorrow, The Washington Post will publish another of the EXCLUSIVE SERIES of reports by the Gallup Poll on how the American people are reacting to the grave military crisis in Korea and its underlying implications. These reports will deal with the following vital questions—

Which do the American people consider more important—that the U. S. stay out of another world war, or that Russian expansion in Europe and Asia be stopped?

How far is the public willing to go at this time in mobilizing the strength of the U. S.?

Should the U. S. help rearm Western Germany? Japan?

What should be done about the Communists in the U. S.?

Should U. S. industry shift to all-out production now?

How will we pay for the war? What is the people's reaction to immediate increases in income taxes?

ARTFUL CHARM
Prompts a curtsey to today's genius. The acquired skill of generations have here contrived a happy blend of things old and things new. The gracious living room slyly steals a breeze from the Potomac. Sit on the terrace and sip a long cool drink or dine in the bay window and watch the boats ply the river; 2 charming bedrooms, each boasting outsize double closets, 2 baths, a shipshape kitchen and a breakfast room complete this level. Below is perfection in a monster bedroom with a bath, private entrance and a fireplace all its own. Need we mention the garage, laundry area, maid's facilities, and the furnace room? Watergate Concerts Lose $35,000

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The recently completed Watergate concert series ran up a record-breaking deficit of approximately $35,000, it was disclosed yesterday.

The Sesquicentennial Commission, which underwrote the traditional series to the extent of $20,000, will put up this amount, but the National Symphony Orchestra now faces the problem of digging up the other $15,000. Deficits in recent years have averaged about $9000, a Symphony spokesman said.

Both groups put most of the blame for the shortage on the bad weather in July. Seven of the 19 scheduled outdoor concerts were cancelled.

The Orchestra Association's administrative committee, it was learned, now is considering a plan for a special gala benefit concert to be held early in September as a means of raising about $10,000 of the deficit. The program would feature "five or six national artists" plus the orchestra and the 5000 seats at Watergate would be pegged at $2 each.

Another proposal arising from the shortage came from Emerson Meyers, head of the Sesquicentennial's Music Division. He urged construction of a shed—open on all sides—for future summer concerts in which programs could go on—rain or shine.

Meyers said "concerts all over the Eastern Seaboard have been washed out this summer," while Chicago, which has a shed, has enjoyed a successful season.

Meyers estimated a shed, placed on publicly owned land, would cost about $250,000. This was based on the $80,000 cost of the Berkshire Festival shed with additional funds set aside for construction of stage facilities suitable for opera and consideration of increased building costs.

Within a few years, the summer programs would amortize cost of the structure and prevent losses, Meyers declared.

The Symphony Association recently completed its $190,000 1950 Sustaining Fund drive, but this amount did not anticipate a Watergate deficit beyond the Sesquicentennial $20,000 underwriting.

How to Get a Husband

Kinship Between Food and Love Is Close

By Cora Carlyle

THE adage that the way to a man's stomach is through his heart is based on the idea that love and food are inextricably bound. A man's earliest memories are associated with the act of feeding. To the baby, his mother's gifts of food meant also the gift of her love.

It's almost axiomatic among adults that food tastes better when eaten with friends than with uncongenial people. Haven't you at some time said to your girl friend, "why is it I'd rather eat with John in the automat than with Harry at the Waldorf? Because you like John, the food tastes better, whatever it is. Just the opposite happens when you dine with Harry. There are some sensitive souls who react so violently to incompatible dining companions their gastic juices don't function properly and indigestion is the result. At Montaigne, the French philosopher, wrote, "To dine with friends is to dine well."

The relationship between food and emotions is a significant one . . . it was Socrates who located the stomach as the seat of the emotions. Therefore—and mark this carefully—we regard the business of feeding—and eating with—a man one of the most important in helping you win him. By feeding him you are stirring old memories . . . you are tapping his emotional center . . . you are opening the way to a real attachment. The earliest transport of love was to his mother—the first woman of his life—to feed him. Now, you are going to feed him and become the next important woman in his life.

We know of no better place to establish the preliminary rapport between lovers than over the dining table. Eating is one of the great pleasures of life and it is an incomparable experience when spiced by the delightful nonsense of two people who are exploring each other's mind and personality. A first date is many times at dinner and there is no better opportunity to make progress with a man. He is in the most amenable frame of mind—relaxed and ready to respond to you.

Hollywood has always recognized the value of this psychological fact. How many movies have you seen in which the lovers pick out a certain restaurant for their very own? And when circumstances force them apart, doesn't the girl or the man return alone to their favorite dining room to bask in the warmth of pleasant memories?

Casual Pot Luck Best

NO restaurant, of course, can compete with the real thing, i.e. feeding him yourself. If your family and home atmosphere are congenial to the boy friend, invite him casually to take pot luck with the family. It will give you an opportunity to serve him personally. Every man loves to have a fuss made over him and whipping up a favorite dish or dessert will make him purr like a cat.

If you feel you can succeed better without bringing the family into the foreground, invite him for scrambled eggs and cocoa after the movies. This can be done without too much family involvement. If he isn't the type who enjoys a late snack, suggest having cocktails at home before your dinner date. A pleasing plate of hors d'oeuvres designed by your own little hands will impress and flatter him no end.

If you live alone and dinner is beyond your capacity, an invitation to Sunday Brunch will please any man. Since Sunday signifies home in its most glorified state to most men, what could be better for your program than to invite an eligible man to spend such a day with you.

Most single men eat in restaurants so often that the warmth of an evening at home usually leaves an indelible impression. Such evenings can serve to give a man a foretaste of what life with you would be like. Once your beau has enjoyed eating and being served by you in intimate surroundings, he'll be loath to relinquish such pleasures. You'll be building a relationship with the same firm roots as when Mama fed him in his high chair. Further he'll never give up his independence to go out with the boys, his freedom to play the field and the privilege of having his entire income for his fancies, unless he's compensated fully and adequately.

After a man has wined and dined you for a period of time, it is natural and courteous to do some reciprocal entertaining. We have seen many girls go on year after year from restaurant to restaurant without realizing that they are always on the receiving end. Even though it is a lot of trouble for the girl whose working day is from nine to five, she should return some hospitality.

Some Effort Necessary

YOU can't be lazy and get along in this world. Your own physical comforts should not loom so important that making a cup of tea for a man is too much for you. Experiment after experiment proves that the human being is capable of many times the energy he does expend. If you have been a close observer of your own conduct, you, too, must have noticed that you have limitless energy for the things you want to do but an irksome task can quickly exhaust you. Too great a concern with oneself and one's physical comfort is the inevitable index of a lack of interest. If you find it too hard to feed your possible mate, it is time to restate for yourself your aim to get a husband.

No man enjoys eating with a girl who picks at her food or is too fussy. Perhaps, you have a delicate appetite with definite likes and dislikes but while the waiter is waiting for your selections, don't bore your escort with the details of why you can't eat veal, lamb or spinach. If a cup of tea isn't a cup of tea unless it's steaming hot, don't upset your host's digestion by making a scene.

Let your companion make suggestions as to the courses. Exercise tact and gauge a man's purse in selecting or rejecting the most expensive courses on the menu. A man is justly resentful if he feels he is being 'taken' and a similar opportunity to do so will probably never be given again.

Suggestions Appreciated

A man is also subtly flattered that you've taken the time to choose a special place for your date with him. There are many out-of-the-way places that you can discover for him by looking up your local newspapers. As these restaurants are usually more reasonable than the popular ones, he will be pleased not only for the money saved, but also for your protective interest. Even if the man is a liberal spender, he'll be grateful for such consideration.

Men take great stock in a girl's manners. Since manners really are an outward manifestation of our consideration for others, and are a necessary requirement for civilized living in all walks of life, we are amazed how many gals forget they've ever learned when they get into a restaurant. Perhaps it's the fault of education. Maybe these gals have been misled into thinking it is smart to send a waitress back a half a dozen times for a special kind of bread or a particular kind of dressing. Such thoughtlessness registers on a man's mind. While it may not stop him from falling in love with you, oftimes such trivialities balance the scale against you.

Perhaps, you are the girl who must be late for an appointment? You may have minutes to spare but you'll walk around the block just to be sure you're not on time. Don't fool yourself. Those anxious moments of waiting won't make the boy friend's heart beat faster. It's probably ruining the gastric tract which is needed to cement the feeling between food and love and you. It doesn't matter if you're the business girl or the lady of leisure, you should be scrupulously prompt as every courteous individual. The girl who is always late is just like a man who sawed off the limb of the tree on which he was sitting. Her excuse usually has the ring of falsity, which will cause him to look for a more thoughtful and reliable friend elsewhere. Respect his time and many pesky little scenes will be avoided.

A girl who is conscious of her manners could not lose her temper over such trivialities as poor service or cold food. The expression of such negative emotions harms you and robs you of energies that could be put to far greater advantages.

WMAL Leases Ice Palace for Television Shows

The Chevy Chase Ice Palace, 4461 Connecticut ave., will be converted into television studios for Station WMAL-TV, the Evening Star Broadcasting Co. announced yesterday.

In a long-term lease agreement with the Chevy Chase Park and Shop Stores, Inc., owners of the building, the company said it would build three TV studios in space now occupied by the skating rink.

The move is scheduled for "early October," the broadcasting company said. Only the second floor will be used for studios, not the bowling alleys or shops below, according to the announcement.

The present WMAL-TV studio, located at 1625 K st. nw., will be supplanted by two studios about 40 by 70 feet and a third of 30 by 50 feet on Connecticut ave.

One of the two larger studios, designed for audience participation shows, will have a 23-by-32-foot stage. The company said its TV expansion will allow production of more local television programs.

The WMAL-TV transmitter will remain on the American University campus, but film projection equipment will be moved to the new studios to permit televising of both live and filmed shows.

Seems Godfrey Put The Program on Ice

—By C. E. Butterfield—

A CHANGE in plans will bring back the TV version of the CBS Talent Scouts simultaneously with the return of the radio series on August 28, although Arthur Godfrey still will have four weeks of his vacation left. It turns out that before he went away he not only sound recorded four programs ahead of time, but also put them on the film recordings known as "kinescopes" for TV.

Godfrey

Eddie Mayehoff, satirical comedian, is joining the broadcast of the NBC Symphony Sunday night. He is to be narrator in the presentation of the musical fantasy, "Alice in Orchestralia." After the war Mayehoff was quite active as television "first" comedian, but lately has been working in other fields.

THE Radio-TV fall fight schedule out of New York finally has been stabilized. Beginning September 8 in cooperation with two sponsors, NBC and CBS TV hookups and ABC radio will resume normal boxing operations.

The delay in getting the schedule set has been due to the many weeks required by the Boxing Managers Guild and the International Boxing Club to come to terms over the division of the money from radio-TV rights. The new agreement was declared to include the sponsor payment of $750,000 for the rights to a series of 70 bouts. Out of this sum main bout fighters in Madison Square Garden are to receive 2500 each, those in other arenas $1000 each.

In returning to the arrangement in effect last spring, which was terminated earlier than usual because of the differences over division of the rights money, the Friday night bouts in the Garden will be carried simultaneously by ABC radio and NBC-TV, but with different announcers. CBS-TV will handle Wednesday fights either from New York's St. Nicholas Arena, or Detroit or Chicago, depending on developments. One sponsor will cooperate in the double Friday night relays, with another paying the bill on Wednesday nights.

WHEN Art Linkletter's People Are Funny comes back on NBC for another season, it will have two broadcasts the same night instead of presenting the extra one Saturday mornings. The regular show will be at 10:30, with a recorded repeat of the previous week's broadcast at 7:30 to a selected list of 21 stations.

Elimination of the Saturday time came about after the summer replacement, Life in Your Hands and a who-dun-it, had started. The repeat was put on at the usual Saturday spot in the midst of a group of children's programs. When some local column criticism developed over broadcasting a crime mystery under these circumstances, the program was taken off.

A RADIO organ, pipes and all, heard coast to coast on many an occasion the past 17 years, is going to West Point to spend the rest of its career. It is being installed in the chapel, where its music will become the private possession of the nation's future army officers.

The organ, presented to the Military Academy by NBC, had special quarters in the Radio City studios. It was set up in 1933 at a cost of more than $20,000. Rated as the finest of the concert type instruments, it was used for concert and religious programs as well as solo broadcasts. The person who played it more often than almost anyone else was George Crook, who at one time had a regualr program series.

That's What Makes Life So Complicated

Ray Wilson, the WQQW announcer, passes along a story told by a professor at American University.

A father, giving his son advice on how to succeed in the world, said: "Son, you've got to jump at every opportunity."

"But how can I tell which ones are opportunities?" asked the son.

"You can't," replied the wise father. "You've just got to keep jumping."

DEVINE OBSERVATION

"Generally speaking," observes W. M. Devine of 234 F st. nw., "women are generally speaking."

"AND ON YOUR LEFT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN"

About a week ago, I was needling a friend of mine who drives a sightseeing limousine.

"You guys are a traffic menace," I said. "You slow down as you pass points of interest, and motorists behind you have all they can do to keep from ramming into you. Then, to make matters worse, you stick your hand out the window and point—and of course the guy behind you thinks that's a signal for a turn."

"I'm surprised," he chided, "that a fellow with your alleged intelligence would condemn all sightseeing drivers because of the mistakes of some."

"Maybe you're right," I conceded, "but I still say that you can't give 'full time and attention' to your driving and still tell tourists all about Washington."

"Nonsense," he replied, "all we do is rattle off a speech we know by heart."

Our argument ended in a draw, mostly because I was just making conversation, and wasn't really serious about my complaints.

But a few days later, I was circling the Ellipse and as I came abreast of the back end of the White House, I spotted a three-car crash.

At the head of the procession was the sightseeing limousine driven by my friend; behind, like elephants in a circus parade, were a new Chevy driven by a woman and a coupe driven by a college boy.

My friend said he had been "stopped for fully a minute" showing his passengers the White House, the woman said he had cut over in front of her just before stopping, and the young man said that when the other two cars banged into each other he piled up, too.

The Park Police scratched their heads and invited everybody down to headquarters to make a formal statement. They couldn't tell who had caused the accident, and neither could I.

But I find myself wondering (seriously, this time) whether sightseeing drivers really can give full time and attention to both their cars and their passengers.

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. Max D. Bovey, 320 S. Tennessee ave., Martinsburg, W. Va.: The reason I don't run my picture at the head of the column is that we have a circulation drive on right now, and I don't want to frighten any readers away.

Kenneth Miller, 315 Holly ave., Takoma Park, Md.: Hold your fire; our circulation director is investigating and promises prompt results.

SUGGESTION BOX

Black raincoats and leaky skies make traffic policemen hard to see at night. Wouldn't white raincoats be more practical?

One-Armed Bandit Appears In Guise of Cigarette Vendor

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—Out at new Friendship International Airport they have a machine into which you can put a nickel—and may be get a package of cigarettes. Possibly not.

The machines will vend cigarettes at the usual price. But you can put in a nickel and hope to get up to 20 packages—or nothing.

Hyman Pressman, Baltimore attorney who lost five nickels in the slot-machine type cigarette vendor, argued today the things are "immoral."

Walter F. Perkins, airport board chairman who lost four nickels, said they weren't.

Pressman, a nonsmoker but one who has been carrying on personal warfare against the airport cigarette machines, wasn't quite sure why he played in the first place.

His only explanation was he yielded to "the strange attraction" which they seem to have for everyone—"Young or old, rich or poor, intelligent or ignorant. Their revolving cherries present a temptation as irresistible as the apple was to Adam and Eve."

Baltimore owns the airport, but it is in Anne Arundel County, where slot machines are legal.

'Open' Reporting Needed in Korea

By Drew Pearson

It is important that the American public know the rules of news censorship laid down by General MacArthur for covering the Korean war.

Pearson

Theoretically, there is no censorship, since newsmen are not required to show their dispatches to Army officers. However, General MacArthur has issued a definite directive to newsmen which is highly important and which, as reported by the Columbia Broadcasting System, states that "criticism of command decisions or the conduct of Allied soldiers on the battlefield will not be tolerated."

Also significant is the fact that this new directive was issued one day after Homer Bigart of the New York Herald Tribune cabled a dispatch analyzing the conduct of United States troops, reporting that they were untrained, and that top officers had to remain with them when under fire to keep them from breaking. Bigart reported that this was the reason why there were such heavy casualties among officers.

The fact is that MacArthur had the largest segment of the United States Army under him in Japan, and failure to train troops is, of course, a direct reflection on him and his chief commander, Lieut. Gen. Walton Walker.

The new MacArthur directive barring newspaper criticism is in direct contradiction to the censorship rules laid down for newspapers in this country during World War II. At that time both the Army and Navy agreed that criticism was healthy, important, in fact, necessary. It is also in violation of Woodrow Wilson's famous statement in World War I: "We do not need less criticism, but more. It is hoped that criticism will be constructive, but better unfair criticism than autocratic repression."

Need for Criticism

Perhaps if there had been more newspaper scrutiny and criticism of the entire defense setup, including tanks and our easy training schedule for American troops in Japan, things might now be better in Korea.

Criticism of the United States military in Japan, however, has always been difficult. MacArthur just did not tolerate it.

For instance, here is a secret cable sent by MacArthur to Washington in 1946 in which he proposed barring certain newspapers. While few would disagree with MacArthur about barring the Daily Worker, it is hard to understand his reasons for barring such staid newspapes as the New York Herald Tribune, the San Francisco Chronicle and the Christian Science Monitor. Nevertheless his cable read:

"Cincafpac, Tokyo.—While continuing my doubts as to the advisability of the contemplated trip, in view of the insistence of the War Department, I will withdraw my objection. I would like to have an opportunity to pass upon those contemplated for selection before their invitation is accomplished. I believe the list should not include actual writers but should be limited to publishers and editors and should not include those connected with papers of known hostility to the occupation. Such papers are the Christian Science Monitor, Herald Tribune, Chicago Sun, San Francisco Chronicle, PM, Daily Worker and others of this stamp whose articles and editorials have not only been slanted but have approached downright quackery and dishonesty. /signed/ MacArthur."

This policy of ousting independent newsmen continued right up to the Korean crisis. As late as June 12, London Times Correspondent Frank Hawley was ordered out of Japan merely because he reported what was a well-established fact—namely, that a MacArthur-inspired ban on Japanese demonstrations was unconstitutional.

Oklahoma's Aftermaths

The people of Oklahoma have now shown what they think of speculating Senators by defeating Senator "Cotton Elmer" Thomas in the Democratic primaries. They also came within a hair's breadth of kicking out Congressman Victor Wickersham for his salary finaglings, and doubtless will finish the job in the November elections.

Strings for Blick

Senator Ken Wherry, Nebraska Republican, is pulling strings to have Washington Police Lieutenant Roy Blick promoted to inspector. This promotion will be Blick's reward for opening secret police files on sex unfortunates for Wherry's examination . . . gossipmongers are spreading the word that Bill Boyle, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is so ill he won't be able to direct the Democratic campaign this fall. The fact is that Boyle is rapidly recovering from a slight infection and is due back at his desk within two weeks.
